Business Will Not Be Materially Affected by the National Mourning Except in London

THE KING'S DEATH has, of course, cast a gloom over society, and in the Old Land, particularly in London, the cancellation of social functions and public entertainments will have, it is feared, a serious effect on business. At this distance however, and in this practical land, sincere though was our respect and esteem for the late genial English gentleman we were proud to call "The King," we shall still go about our business with uninterrupted energy. This store sees no reason for not emphasizing its daily shopping programmes with the forcefulness they deserve.

Programme for Friday, "Bargain Day," May 13, 1910
