A MOTHER'S TEACHINGS. BY LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY.

The boy sat list ning to the words That from his mother fell, Pure lessons, wrapped in tender tones Like music's softest swell.

And oft he marked her musing brow, With holy silence bright, And blessed its placid smile, and deem'd That angels loved the sight.

But when the mother laid her down To rest in mouldering clay, The world's temptation o'er him roll'd, And swept his faith away.

Like birds that scorn the fowler's snare. He trifled with his fate, Forgot to seek the Spirit's aid, Or for its teachings wait.

Yet once as in his midnight watch, The lonely deck he pac'd, With the sad, solemn stars above, And round old Ocean's waste.

Methought nER warning voice, who long 'Neath the cold sod had slept---Spoke forth from every rushing wave, That on resistless swept.

Methought a tear-drop like her own. Fell from a gathering cloud, That round the beauty of the moon Had wreath'd its silver shroud.

Methought the searching eye of God. Flam'd in his secret soul, And down the proud man bowed with tears To own its strong control.
