A SUPER PASSPORT

Passports, these days, are more precious than gold and infinitely harder to acquire from a reluctant government. But there are passports and passports—those signed in ink with red sealing wax, which are good so far as they go, and other kinds such as little metal disks carried on watch chains and bearing the family crest of the owner. Of course this kind cannot take its owner into a port of entry, but it may be more potent once that barrier is passed. It is by the magic of this Alladin's seal that Levon H. Harpoonian hopes to rescue his wife and three children, bringing them out of Turkey to America. An Armenian by birth, Mr. Harpoonian has been an American citizen for many years, in business in New York. This he is giving up to sail in an attempt to rescue his family, caught in Turkey, from whom he has had no direct word for many months. He is also commissioned to gather as many as possible of his relatives, near and distant, whom he may find there, and he hopes there may be many. According to the last word received his people are in Harpoot, well, and under the protection of the American consul. But to come back to the seal which is to accomplish this. It is a tiny little engraved circle, this emblem of the family's influence in that part of the country—curiously wrought in silver and made to fold inconspicuously into its innocent looking case. For many generations the Harpoonians have been influential and well liked in the city of Harpoot and its environs, holding a large amount of property there. Particularly with the Koordish chiefs who rule the mountain districts they have been on friendly terms, often rendering them important favors. Counting on the deep gratitude of these mountain neighbors Mr. Harpoonian plans to enlist them in his cause. He will travel through Russia, down to Erzinjan and from there send messages bearing the impress of the precious seal to the Koordish chiefs. With their help and the convoy they can and will furnish, the Harpoonians caught in Turkish cities will be able to escape to Erzinjan. From there they will all return to America by way of Russia, and chief among their possessions will be—one seal, king of passports!

"The Deemster," Hall Caine's great story, Gem, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday; nine reels, 3,500 people in cast. A picture wonder.

The Browns have just telephoned that they can't come to our dinner. "That's too bad." "Yes, but I think they should have let me know earlier." "Why?"

ANNETTE KELLERMAN, whose great photo play, "A Daughter of the Gods," will be seen this year by millions, and who is appearing in person at the New York Hippodrome, says: Adams California Fruit Gum lives up to its name. All the delicious California fruits are surely responsible for its flavor.
