mountain troops in an endeavor to cap-ture a chain of hills running eastwards to Cassel. Among them are the Alpine corps. "An officer of this corps in a letter which has fallen into our hands says:—'We have made up our minds to plunder again ruthlessly. In the Alpine corps we understand the business.'

"Prisoners are expressing disquiet and property of the property of the same of the property of surprise at the appearance of French troops in Flanders. They understood that the object of the present offensive was to separate the two armies, crush the British and force the French to make terms. They are now realizing that the effect has so far been to consolidate the joint action of the armies to a degree not witnessed since the days of Mons.

"The latest news from our whole front is that all is quiet. No news is the best news at present when every day of quiet adds to our strength.

"The Germans are energetically repairing roads and bringing up large quantities of concrete slabs which they lay like paving stones. So soon as they are nicely set our gunners tear great craters in the smooth surface. A cap-tured letter describing the appearance of the Bapaume road pays tribute to the devastating work of our airmen and artillery. It describes the ditches piled with corpses, the shattered highway strewn with debris and carcasses of horses. It says the road can no longer be used. Our airmen report that Ba-statements recent drafts largely consist, and shows what the failure of this supreme effort means to Germany."

FRENCH ARRIVAL

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep.
God bless my brother gone to war
Across the seas, in France, so far.
Oh. may his fight for liberty
Save millions more than little me
From cruel fates or ruthless blast,
And bring him safely home at last.

All the bells of heaven may ring, All the wells on earth may spring, All the winds on earth may bring All sweet sounds together; Sweeter far than all things heard, Welling water's winsome word, Wind in warm wan weather.

One thing yet there is, that none Hearing ere its chime be done, Knows not well the sweetest one, Heard of man beneath the sun, Hoped in heaven hereafter; Soft and strong and loud and light, Very sound of very light Heard from morning's roslest height, When the soul of all delight Fills a child's clear laughter.

Golden bells of welcome rolled Never forth such notes, nor told Hours so blithe in tones so bold, As the radiant mouth of gold ...Here that rings forth heaven, ... If the golden-crested wren Were a nightingale—why, then, Something seen and heard of men Might' be half as sweet as when Laughs a child of seven. -Algernon Charles Swinburne.
