A British vessel, while in Aresa Bay, struck on what appeared to be a sunken rock. It is a common occurrence and is due to the weakness of the spine, the hens being injured. It seldom occurs except when the flock is in a fat condition, and the make clumsy and heavy. We suggest that the male be removed from the flock, as he is of no value at this season.

By the first vessel, while in Aresa Bay, struck on what appeared to be a sunken rock. It transpired that the vessel had run into a large whale, the steel prow being so deeply imbedded in the flesh of the fish that the engines had to be reversed in order to set the vessel free.

Bust Raths.

Bust Raths.

What is meant by a dust box is a box nearly full of fine dry dirt that has been sifted. Coal ashes are excellent, but at this season the dirt is more easily procured. If the hense are at liberty it will take but a few minutes to scoop out a hole and fill it with dry dirt, and the dirt should be revoved after each rain, as damp earth is not easily dusted into the feathers by the hens. The use of dust by the hense is to drive lice away, and this will be accomplished, provided the poultry house is kept clean and free of vermin.

Green Feed in Pens.

When given food in given the hense in confinement in yards it should be first cut up, as they cannot easily pick off the leaves should the green food drag after them. They pull off their green food drag after them. They pull off their green food on to being able to bite it, and know nothing about holding it with their feet in order to pick it, hence if the food is not to be wasted, always cut it up fine for the hense before throwing it into the pens, and they will eat it up cleaner.
