The mate of the steamer Calidias which had brought a cargo of raw sugar, and was lying at the refinery wharf, had brought with him on the trip his wife and child, and was bringing them ashore about two o'clock. St. James' Church 70th Anniversary

Rev. H. A. Cody Delivered Interesting Address on the Church History.

In St. James' church yesterday the seventieth anniversary and Thanksgiving services were held. At the morning service the pastor, Rev. H. A. Cody, took for his sermon "The Spirit of St. James."

The evening service was also conducted by the pastor, and the subject which he spoke on was "The History of St. James'." These services were largely attended and special music was provided for the occasion.

There was a large attendance at the children's service with the pastor, Rev. H. A. Cody officiating. The subject Mr. Cody took for his address was "Love." This word was used in acoustic fashion and was the text of the sermon.

There was a large congregation present at the evening service when the pastor in a lengthy address gave a complete history of the church from their first organization to the present date.

In the course of his sermon Mr. Cody said that it was in October, 1851, that the first St. James Church was consecrated. It was a pretty wooden building, cruciform in shape. There were two transepts in which there were galleries, and also a gallery over the western entrance in which were placed the organ and choir.

Most unfortunately nearly all the records of this first church in 1877 in the Great Fire. But the account of the first consecration service has been preserved. It was on Wednesday, October 2nd, 1851, that the Rev. Henry Moore preached on the Sunday following there was a large attendance and the Rev. James Diebrow read the prayers and the Rev. William Gray gave address. The choir, which was composed of the choir of the church, was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. John Armstrong. The church warden during the first year of St. James were William Wright of Hill Majesty's Customs and John M. Robinson, barrister, and grandfather of the present bankers of the same name. What is now Broad street, was at that time Mad street, and Lower Grove was the residential section of the city.

In 1877, the great disaster of the fire swept over the city leaving a few houses here and there, and great suffering in its wake. As soon as possible after the fire the Rev. William Armstrong was mainly instrumental in collecting $10,000, which was the total amount required for the building of a new church. The cornerstone of it was laid on Wednesday, June 26th, 1878, and the edifice was opened for public worship on January 5th, 1879.

The Jubilee of St. James was held on October 22nd, 1901, twenty-three years after the consecration of the new church; the people assisted in the jubilee were about 2,500. The service was conducted by the Rev. W. O. Raymond and lessons read by Rev. Leo Hoyt. The pastor, Rev. A. D. Dowdney spoke.

Through Renovation

A thorough renovation of the church took place in 1899, when the interior of the church was made over. The ceiling which had been stained and water-damaged was replaced by a beautiful one of spruce, practically without a knot. The arches and cross-pieces in the building were made of oak, as also the seats and the rest of the interior work. A pulpit of oak was placed in the church in memory of the pastor's son.
