Reynolds, Mterary agent, came to me and stated that he was the authorized agent of Count Teistoi for the sale of his novel, which had rocently been an-nounced through the press as in course of preparation. I took pains to go to Mr. Ernest H. Croeby, who, it was un-derstood, sustained intimate relations with Count Tolstoi, for confirmation of the claim that Mr. Reynolds was Count Conducted by Mr. Reynolds might be relied upon. Bangor in 1900. There was a heavy crush at the Union depot Wednesday. As the excursion trains from east and west brought crowds into the city they were met by large numbers of local people and literally crowded the flace. Depot Officer John Colline said it was as big a day's rash as any since the time the soldiers left for the Northwest. There strived 36 carse of excursionists over the I C. R., and 19 over the C. P. R., and these in addition to the regular trains. Then the visitors came to the city by the Shore Line Rail-way and the boats. It was a big gather-ing surely. The first excursion to leave the city was that for Moneton which pulled out at 6.25, a double header of 14 cars. Fitseen minutes later another of 13 cars left, with two engines, for Moneton, Sackville and Amherst. The regular 10.30 I. C. R. train had three extra cars attached. The Woodstock special left for home over the C. P. R. at 7.15. It was made up of six cars, and was fol-lowed at 8.05 by a train of seven coaches, bearing the St. Stephen excur-sions homeward.
