Tea in the Garden of Eden

A Tommy wrote to his mother from Mesopotamia :

"This may be the Garden of Eden, but the only thing that makes it endurable is our daily ration of Lipton's. In fact, Lipton's is the only thing hereabouts that I'm not 'fed up' on."

There is a universality about Lipton's that strikes home to English-speaking people wherever they may be.

To thoroughly enjoy Tea you must get Lipton's, and make it according to the directions on each package.

A Broken Wedding Ring

By Bertha M. Clay

Again the painful silence fell over them, unbroken this time by any sound. The girls stood with white faces, looking from one man to the other.

"My children," said Martin Ray, "I leave it to you."

He turned away his head, too proud at that moment to let the expression of his face be seen.

"And I," said General Hutton, looking at each of his nieces, "leave it to you also. My dead sister's child, as you will, but do not forget your mother's words."

With a cry, the girls clasped their arms around each other. In that moment they felt quite alone in the world. How were they to make such a choice? To Leah's mind resoured the memory of her fervent prayers for some one who would deliver her from her "furnace of fire." She looked into the blue eyes of her sister.

"It is what I prayed for," she whispered.

Then slowly, as the waters of a great divide, the two girls separated, sadly, mournfully, looking back with lingering regret, yet never faltering; and Leah, the child whom Martin Ray had loved, of whom he had been so unutterably proud, whom he had hoped to see his political successor, beautiful dark-eyed Leah, went to her uncle and laid her hand upon his.

"I prayed to Heaven for deliverance," she said, "and you have brought it. I accept your offer."

With a bitter cry, Martin Ray turned to her. There was dignity in the sorrow of his voice and face.

"You make your choice—deliberately and—willfully Leah?"

"I make it of my own free will, father. I would have chosen death rather than the life you mapped out for me."

Loving arms were placed around her neck; a loving, beautiful face was laid against his.

"I will never leave you, father," said Hettie. "I will give my life to you."

So for some minutes they stood—the general with his arm thrown round Leah, as though from that moment he would shield her from all harm, and from every one; Hettie clasping her father's neck, her face wet with tears.

"I accept your offer, uncle," said Leah, in a calm, clear voice; "and I shall always believe that Heaven sent you to me."

"I will never leave you, father!" cried Hettie. "My love shall make up to you for the loss of Leah!"

"I do not say that I shall cease to love my father—you have no right to imply such a thing, Hettie—but I cannot refuse to take advantage of my uncle's kindness."

"I will never leave you, father darling!" cried the younger girl. "The more they say against you, the more I will love you. I do not believe any of the accusations against you, and I love you with all my heart." It was beautiful to see the light in her face, the love in her eyes, the childish passion of wounded pride with which she clung to him, the tender nose with which the little white hand stroked and caressed him. "I would not leave you, dear," she repeated, "if he would, make me queen of the whole world! I believe all that you believe, I will never be false to you. Nothing shall ever take me from you."

He was a politician—he had never considered himself a religious man—indeed his ideas on religion were worse and lower than his ideas on politics; yet he bowed his face on the golden head for some minutes, and words not often on his lips came from the. Then he turned to the other two.

"You hear," he said; "there is one faithful to me. You may take the other. I—I give her to you!"

"I could never lead the life you want me to lead, father—never," remarked Leah; "and how would you have borne with me had I refused? Do not think that my heart is not rent."

"You need say no more!" cried Martin Ray. "Have we not heard how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child? I have no son, and I rested my pride, my hopes, my ambition on you; and you have heartlessly deserted me for a stranger who despises me."

"I cannot believe as you believe, father, or think as you think. We must have parted sooner or later; I could not have borne my lot, now that I am beginning to understand you."

Hettie's arms clasped him even more tightly.

"Never mind, father. I will make it all up to you. I will die to save you from pain. She will tire soon, and come back to you."

"Never!" he cried, his face aflame with anger. "Stand away from me, Hettie! Let me see the child so ready to leave me and give up the love of years at the bidding of a stranger!"

Hettie drew back, and at that moment she knew in her heart that his best and dearest love had been given to the daughter who had deserted him.

"Let me look at her!" he cried. "She has deserted me—I have gone to my enemies!"

"I have simply given up a life which has never been tolerable to me, and which grows more unbearable every day. I shall love you always, father; but I shall never share your principles."

His face paled with anger.

"You speak bravely enough now that you know your words give share you principles."

"Three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Henry Oliver, in Sandwich west, who died of influenza, was the fifth victim in the family within two weeks.

The Imperial Life Assurance Company's annual report shows that 61 per cent. of $365,393, of the total 1918 death claims were due to the influenza epidemic.
