

Fig. 5 (left), a typical "Walter" left thumb print in wax, identical in pattern with the left thumb prints in Figs. 1 and 2, and Figs. 7 and 8 on the opposite page. It is indexed to show its identity with the ink print of "Kerwin's" left thumb seen in Fig. 6 (right).

Fig. 8 (right) shows that part of the wax of December 3, 1927, carrying the "Walter" left thumb print in wax.
