

INDEX.

- Anarchy caused by coercion, 171.
 Appereption, 212-221.
 Arithmetic, fundamental error in teaching, 56; pupils should make problems as well as solve them, 110.
 Arnold, Dr., on the aim of the teaching of history, 111.
 Barop on object teaching, 250.
 Blow, Miss, on the difference between the atomism of Rousseau and Pestalozzi and Froebel's idea of unity, 53; on unity in knowledge, 76.
 Botany, teaching too early destroys vital interest in Nature, 57.
 Bowen, H. Courthope, similarity of principles of Carlyle and Froebel, 35; Froebel true psychologist of childhood, 35; on unity or inner connection, 52; on self-activity, 103; on physical development through games, 128; on appereption, 219; on manual training, 255; on religious training, 288.
 Brain, the, aided in growth by bodily activity, 129, 132.
 Bribing to do good, fallacy of, 280.
 Browning, Mrs., on reverence for selfhood, 245.
 Bülow, Baroness von, on Froebel's law of unity, 79; on the law of development, 264; on moral training, 271.
 Cerebral growth increased by self-activity, 93.
 Character too often negative, 277.
 Child study, 1.
 Child, the, more important than knowledge, 102.
 Child development before school life, 105.
 Child the centre of correlation, 209.
 Childhood, rights of, should be sacredly respected, 166.
 Children love to work, 167, 172; should live in contact with Nature, 179-195; should cultivate plants, 186, 192.
 Coercion dwarfs power, 162, 173.
 Comenius, motto of, 68; on less work by teachers and more by pupils, 114.
 Control by external agencies degrades, 164.
 Control and spontaneity, 24, 154-178.
 Co-ordination of neurological system by games, 138.