

cuted this industry in their homes in the early part of the century were alive now and could go through the woollen mills of Canada, they would be astonished at the revolution which has taken place in the industry and the perfection of the machinery for carding, combing, spinning, weaving, knitting and all the other processes, for some of the best equipped woollen mills in the world to-day belong to Canada, the machinery being thoroughly up to date. They would be surprised, too, at the great variety of goods manufactured and the fine quality of many of the articles produced. But it is probable that if every man and woman now living in Canada could walk through the same factories and inspect the goods produced in them the majority of the visitors would be almost as much surprised at the character of these articles as their ancestors would be, for few Canadians have any idea that such fine woollens are produced in Canada. The term "Made in Canada" has quite a new meaning to anyone who has had the privilege of inspecting a number of modern Canadian woollen mills. It may be said: "Can not these goods be seen in the retail stores throughout Canada?" They can be seen in many stores, but unfortunately they are not always displayed as Canadian goods. They are too often sold as
