MAHOGANY FURNITURE.

"The Way to Get It Clean and Give

An experienced housewife gives the following directions for polishing mahogany: First wash theroughly with weak vinegar and water to remove all stains and dust, dry carefully and rub well with a mixture prepared in this way: Put into a pan two ounces of yellow wax, half a pint of boiled linseed oil and one ounce of alkanet root, boiled; stand this in another pan full of boiling water till the wax is all melted and the whole well colored with the alkanet: strain it, and when cool add one gill each of spirits of turpentine and vinegar, mix well together and use. Apply this very thinsharply all the way of the grain till srubbed in, then rub again with an-other clean flaunel, and, lastly, with an old silk handkerchief. The great secret very little polish, with a large amount of rubbing; it is to this the "eggshell gloss," so much admired on antique furniture, is due. Another excellent polish is made in putting into a bottle half a pint each of turps and linseed off, and one gill each of methylated spirits and vinegar, shaking these well together till thoroughly inixed. Always remember to shake the bottle well before using.

Whitelaw Reid, who will succee oseph H. Choate as Ambassador of the United States at the court of St. James, has already served in distinguished positions as diplomat and commissioner. Mr. Reid is perhaps best known, however, as editor of the newspaper founded by Horace Greeley, The New York Tribune. He was born in Xenia, O., in 1837, graduated from Miami University, Oxford, O., in 1856, and has since received degrees from Dartmouth, Princeton, Yale and from Cambridge University, England, He began his journalistic career editing the Xenia (O.) During the Civil war he gained an extensive reputation as a war sor-respondent. He became managing editor of the Tribune in 1869, and when Mr. Greeley ran for President against General Grant supported the former vigorously in The Tribune's columns. He has been editor in chief and chief proprietor of The Tribune since 1872. He declined appointment as Minister to Germany in 1877 and again in 1881. In 1889 he was ap-pointed Minister to France and serv-ed until 1892. In that year he was extensive reputation as a war cor-

Mr. Reid entered after the meeting had begun and was shown to the box at the side of the stage reserved for him, When his entrance was observed a demonstration began. The candidate for Vice-President erose and acknowledged if another trees and acknowledged if negan. The candidate for vice-fresi-dent arose and acknowledged it ap-propriately by bowing. The demon-stration continued, and Mr. Reid arose again and bowed. Then the au-dience began to laugh, and Mr. Reid, who is very dignified, began to be embarrassed.

"They want you on the platform," said a member of the committee.

"Wall, then, what in the world are they laughing at me for?" demanded the offended candidate.

"Why, it's all a mistake. Chauncey Depew's got the box above you, and when the crowd began to shout a welcome at your arrival he thought they were calling for him. He began bowing acknowledgments too. A man's just gone up to see him."

Mr. Reid has devoted himself to his work as proprietor of The Tribune since the defeat of the Republican national ticket in 1892, but on three occasions has accepted appointment to temporary positions of honorary character. He was special ment to temporary positions of hon-orary character. He was special Ambassador of the United States to the diamond jubilee of Queen Vic-toria in 1897, member of the com-mission which negotiated the treaty of peace with Spain in 1898 and spe-cial Ambassador of the United States for the coronation of King Edward VII. of England in 1902. THE ILLS OF THE AGED Marker is Presm.

A strange crime, which the accused alleges was committed under the influences of a dream, is reported in The Friend of India, from a village in Upper Burmah. A man who was living in a house with his two nieces, and asked them to cook it for the evening meal. As it was full moon day, the girls objected on religious day, the girls objected on religious day, the girls objected on religious grounds.

The uncle insisted upon the meal being prepared, but by some oversight the usual food offering to propitiate the god was omitted. When the man was asleep he states that he dreamt he had became a king and that his right to the throne was being questioned by two policemen. Thinking he was fighting them, he seized his knife, but attacked his two nieces, who soon sucumbed to their dreadful injuries.

The man, still sleeping, rested for a while and when he awoke, being still impressed by his dream, struck a match and then perceived the mangled bodies of the two girls. He collapsed at the Sight of the blood and wept bitterly till daylight, when he reported the matter to the village authorities, whe put him under arrest.

"People admired the cadi for this exhibition of humility. He was rich, and his house was sumptuous. But, amid all that elegance, the net, the sign of the man's lowly birth, was always prominently displayed.

"The story of the net spread through the city and finally reached the ears of the caliph. He, in due time, sent for cadi, took him into his favor and made him his grand vizier. "Thus,' said Haroun al Raschid, 'we reward humility.'

"From the day of his appointment the grand vizier ceased to exhibit his fishing net. It disappeared, and it was never spoken of.

RUSSIA'S DANGER SPOTS. Englishman Says They Are Towns-Stu-

The danger spots of Russia are the towns, writes a correspondent of The London Express. Yet—and here is another argument against a general revolution—the population of the towns forms only one-twelfth of the whole nation. Contrast this with the urban population of England—60 per cent of the whole. And of this one-twelfth a full third is composed of foreigners resident in those towns, who take and will take no part is national politics. Thus it is obvious that these danger spots are, after all, mere specks in the great expanse of the Russian race.

Nevertheless it is in these towns that the danger lies, and at present the "students," male and female, are the disturbing element. Nor are the causes which arouse their activity merely a natural ambition for the progress of their country or a Slav sensitiveness to its low position in European civilization. I believe that in addition to these the terrible grinding poverty of thousands of these students is the dominant factor which makes for the new socialism—not nihilism, be it noted—of the revolting force of Russia. The great The danger spots of Russia are the not nihilism, be it noted—of the re-volting force of Russia. The great majority of the students hold small Government scholarships, mere pit-tances which are just large enough to allure them to the towns, but totally insufficient to support them when they get there. Thousands of the Russian students cannot buy winter clothing or even the necessary boots, and, ill fed, they throng together in wretched lodgings, there to declaim their hapless fate and to decry the Government.

This, then, is the one chief element of danger in Russia. It is neither widespread nor national. Local in its origin, exclusive in its character and peculiar to a single class, it is capable of much mischlef and many explosions, but it is totally incap-able of infecting the masses of the people and the provincial population generally.

MARBLE TOTEM POLES Alaska tribes have decided it would be a good idea to have them carved in stone. The totem poles here pic-tured were made by a western in stone. The totem poles here pictured were made by a western marble cutting firm for the Chilkats, who live near Hains Mission, southeastern Alaska, and who raised $850 to pay for these queer sculptures. Leamington; in Warwickshire, England, affords an interesting instance of what the mere beautifying of a place can do to make a town prosperous. Originally it was a popular interior watering place, but fashion changed and the patronage went sleewhere, property values declined and a spirit of dejection took possession of the people. It afforded no special advantages for manufacturing or commerce, and so they fell back on making it a desirable place of residence. They organized an improvement association, pledged the credit of the town for the purchasing of parks, secured the margin of the Leam River, beautified the banks, laid out walks and drives and even subsidized a brass band and a boat service on the river.

band and a boat service on the river.

With the transformation of Leamington, from an artistic point of view, came the transformation /in property values and in the prosperity of the entire community. All the old houses were filled with families who came there because it was a nice place in which to live, and within five years over 700 new homes were created, and the town has since been prosperous and the people contented.

TAMING A TIGER.

The Way a Showman Got Friendly With a Fierce Beast.

A zoologist thus describes how an ttendant brought about friendly reladons with a fierce tiger: "There was a showman I used to know named Melchior. He once bought a magnificent Bengal tiger, which he got at a low price because it had already killed two men. "At first Melchlor would put his foot or his hand into his cage, but from the way the tiger would leap at him he knew that to put himself entirely in its power would be suicide. Nothing he could do would establish a friendly relationship between himself and the

"Some originality was needed, and Melchior showed it by taking some old clothes, stuffing them with rags and throwing them into the cage. The tiger in a jiffy tore the old clothes to pieces, thinking that the figure was a human being. "Next day and the next day and the next Melchior continued to throw in to the tiger stuffed figures, and the tiger continued to destroy them. But as time passed the animal ceased to put heart into its work and in the end it gave up altogether these attacks on the scarecrows. It would just play with them or else not notice the

"Now was Melchior's time. He opened the cage door one morning, walked in boldly and slapped the tiger familiarly on the back. It gave him a friend-ly look and purred. It took him for another manikin not worth bothering about. It lived seven years with Mel-chior and became as gentle as a kit-

Queer Ways of an Extraordinary

Seet In Turkey.

The Yezidees, the Baal worshipers or devil worshipers of Turkey, are an extraordinary people, and, although forced by the laws of conscription to serve in the Ottoman army, the seizure of one or more of their young men by a Turkish recruiting party is such a distressing spectacle that once witnessed it can never be forgotten.

Wails and yells of despair are raised. Men, women and girls kiss the recruit's eyes, cheeks, mouth and hands. Throwing themse are on the ground, they even embrace his legs and feet.

ground, they even embrace his legs and feet.

The conscript appears quite dazed with sorrow. He folds in his arms and caresses over and over again his weeping kindred, whom he will never see again. He kisses the walls and the hearth of the chin in which he was born, but which he is about to quit forever, and wets them with his tenrs, but when, accompanied by his Turkish captors, he leaves the village the lamentations of the villagers cease.

Then, and as though nothing had happened, the latter go about their ordinary occupations. Never again is the conscript's name mentioned, and on joining his regiment the young Yezi-dee becomes a Mussulman. His kindred, believing him accursed, affect to forget him, and were he to approach the village from which he has been forcibly dragged away every Yezidee, even his denrest friends, his father, mother, brothers, sisters and sweetheart, would drive him from their presence with curses and pelt him with stones.
