

I. JANUARY hath XXXI Days. 1795.

WINTER.

WHERE, where are now those beauties fled, That charm'd the ravish'd eye, When Sol, in all his glory clad, Triumphant rode the sky? How languid looks the land- scapes all! The eye with discontent	Dejected views the cheerless scenes The season does present. The purling streams have ceas'd to flow, Lock'd up in ice severe; The gentle murmurs of the brook. No longer do we hear.
