Railway Time Tables WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA From The Play of BAYARD EILLER

Slowly, very hesitatingly, Garson went back to the chair, and sank down on it in a limp attitude of dejection wholly unlike his customary postures of strength. Again, his fear fascinated eyes went to the row of cells that stood silently menacing on the other side of the corridor beyond the windows. His sickness was creeping stealthily on him, as his thoughts held insistently to the catastrophe that threatened. His intelligence was too keen to permit a elief that Burke's manner of almost fulsome kindliness hid nothing ominous-ominous with a hint of death for

Cassidy, advancing there in the corridor. And with the detective went a A cell door swung open, the prisoner stepped within, the door clanged to he bolts shot into their sockets noisily. Garson sat huddled, stricken-for he had recognized the victim thrust into the cell before his eyes. It was Dacey, one of his own cronies in crime-Dacey, who, the night before, had seen him kill Eddie Griggs. There was something concretely sinister to Garson in this fact of Dacey's presence Of a sudden the forger cried out rauthing on me, I-I would"- The cry dropped into unintelligible mumblings. Burke retained his manner of serene ndifference to the other's agitation Still, his pen hurried over the paper, he expostulated, half banteringly.

"Now, now! What's the matter with you, Joe? I told you that I wanted to ask you a few questions. That's all." But, after a moment, Garson's emotion forced him to another appeal. "Say, inspector"- he began.

Then, abruptly, he was silent, his nouth still open to utter the words that were now held back by horror. Again, he saw the detective walking forward, out there in the corridor. And with him as before, was a second figure, which advanced slinkingly. Again the door swung wide, the prisoner slipped within, the door clanged shut, the bolts clattered noisily into And, in the watcher, terror grewfor he had seen the face of Chicago Red, another of his pals, another who had seen him kill Griggs. At last he licked his dry lips, and his voice broke in a throaty whisper. "Say, inspector, if you've got anything against me, why"-"Who said there was anything against you, Joe?" Burke rejoined, in

"What's the matter with you today, Joe? You seem nervous." Still, the official kept on with his writing. "No, I ain't nervous," Garson cried, with a feverish effort to appear calm, "Why, what makes you think that? Parliament street near Carleton, at But this ain't exactly the place you'd pick out as a pleasant one to spend the morning." He was silent for a little ed a loss largely from water and trying with all his strength to regain his self control, but with small success. Burke believed that his opportunity was come. His hand slipped into the pocket where was the pistol, and clutched it. He stared at Garson iercely, and spoke with a rush of the "Why did you kill Eddie Griggs?" "I didn't kill him!" The reply was quick enough, but it came weakly. Again, Garson was forced to wet his lips with a dry tongue, and to swallow painfully. "I tell you, I didn't kill him!" he repeated at last, with more instant, the pistol leaped into view, pointed straight at Garson. "Why?" the inspector shouted. "Come on, now! "I didn't, I tell you!" Garson was growing stronger, since at last the crisis was upon him. He got to his chair. His gaze fell away from the man confronting him. In the same instant, the rigidity of Garson's form relaxed, and he straightened slowly. "Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you,

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the inspec-

Burke pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?" At the question, all Garson's fears or the woman rushed back on him with appalling force. "I don't know where she was," he ex-nimed doubtfully. He realized his under even as the words left his lips, nd sought to correct it as best he night. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and they said she'd gone to bedheadache, I guess. Yes, she was home of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her dulled his "Know anything about Gilder?" Burke demanded.

"Not a thing," was the earnest an The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson with difficulty suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments the silence was unbroken. Then ently Rurke by a gesture directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed he himself went a little toward the door, and when it opened again and Dick Gilder appeared he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride who stood regarding him with sad eyes. Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office.

"Say, chief." the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed." "Squealed, eh? Do they tell the same story?" And then when the detective had answered in the affirmative he went on speaking in tones pon-erous with self complacency. "I was right, then, after all-right all the time. Good enough." Of a sudden his voice boomed somberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder
