WM. J. BURNS WAS MOBBED

Famous Detective in Trouble in Village of Marietta, Georgia.

MONTREAL, May 2.—A despatch to the Gazette from Marietta, Georgia, says:

A crowd of men and boys mobbed detective William J. Burns late yesterday afternoon when he and W. M. McWorth, an assistant employed with him in the Leo Frank, drove into the city in an automobile. The crowd swarmed around the two detectives as they stood beside their automobile in a local garage and jeered and booed. Robert Howell, a prominent young man of the city, struck Mr. Burns in the face and dared the detective to touch him. For a time it appeared as if the two men might suffer serious harm. Mr. Burns ran into the Whitlock Hotel. A large crowd gathered there and dared him to come out. Finally, after hurried speeches from Philip Morris and T. M. Bromby, the rioters agreed to let Mr. Burns come forth if Mr. Bromby would promise to take the detectives out of the county. Mr. Bromby agreed, and amid jeers and hoots Mr. Burns was hurried out of Marietta on his way to Atlanta. In the meantime the sheriff had taken charge of McWorth and had conducted him out a back way and into a cab along the Roswell road to safety.

This town was the home of Mary Phagan, the slain factory girl, and many of her relatives live here. The detectives declaration that Frank was not guilty, and that James Connolly, a negro, factory sweeper, convicted as an accessory after the murder, alone was responsible for the crime, aroused intense feeling here.

LANSDOWNE FOR PREMIER.

MONTREAL, May 2—Probably the most politically significant event of the day, says a London cable to the Daily Mail, was the indication by Lord Curzon in a speech before a demonstration of the Primrose League that the Marquis of Lansdowne would be the premier of the next Unionist administration.
