Points of a Good
Piano

First, is the case beautiful? (a good action is never hidden in an ugly case.)

Second—is the tone rich? (a golden tone is not acquired by action; it is the product of the highest skill and the most painstaking craftsmanship on parts of the piano that will never be seen.)

Third, is the piano permanent, the tone lasting, the case built to endure? (the gauntness of a cheap piano changes quickly to the shoddiness of old age.)

The Heintzman Pianos we show at our store will pass these tests triumphantly, as they have been doing for 66 years, because the Heintzman is made by a firm that has been making good pianos for so long it is too proud to make any other kind. Come view their masterpiece at our store!

WOLFVILLE

Miss Lillian Stevens of DeBert River has been visiting her aunt Mrs. Edson Graham.

The body of Harris M. Coldwell who died at Framingham, Mass., on June 6th arrived at Wolfville on Wednesday last, for burial.

Mr. Bishop, of Semens, Sask., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Jas. Ryan, Pleasant Street. Mr. Bishop was formerly for some time in the employ of C. E. Bentley & Co's here. He has been on a three months' automobile tour through Canada and the United States and will motor most of the way back to Semens. —Truro Exchange.

When the day breaks and scatters the morning mists in the Valley of Cornwallis, no eye beholds it save that of the military police. At 5.29 a.m. a silence like that of the Sahara. —Mr. J. H. McFadden of the Canadian Inspection Co., travelling throughout Canada is spending his vacation at Canard with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McFadden.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Clarke will be at home to their friends on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. Aug. 23rd and 24th, at their residence in Lower Canard.

By an oversight a notice of service in Canning Baptist Church was omitted from last issue.

Miss Kathleen McFadden of Regina returned to her home at Canard last week having been absent two years. She brought with her her niece, Miss Mary Wyndott of Regina and both will remain several weeks.

Acadia Rhodes Scholar Gives Life For Country

News of the death of Lieutenant Vere K. Mason, of the 11th Suffolk regiment, England, was received by his mother on August 11th. He was killed in action on August 4th, the second anniversary of the war.

Lieutenant Mason, the son of the late Francis F. Mason, was a native of Falkland Ridge, Annapolis, where he attended the public school of the village taking high honors in all subjects. He then entered Acadia university, from which he was graduated in 1914.

During his four years' course at Acadia he not only distinguished himself in his class work, being a leader in all his subjects, but was an enthusiastic athlete, making the football, baseball, hockey and track team. He was of irreproachable and sterling worth, a christian gentleman and a favorite with all. He was the unanimous choice of his classmates for the Rhodes scholarship.

Vere left his home on September 8th, 1914, spending a few weeks with friends in Massachusetts, for his four years' course at Oxford university.

He spent three weeks at school and then enlisted in the infantry of a McGill unit of Montreal, which had arrived in England. He remained in England with his unit from October 1914 to March 1915 and went with it to France where he remained till January 1916.

He was then gazetted and made lieutenant and took a six weeks' course at the military school at Ipswich, England, after which he enlisted in the 11th Suffolk regiment, which remained in training in England till the last of June, 1916, when it was ordered to the front. On this occasion he again wrote to his mother saying: "Mother! This is the life. I have 25 men under me and I feel that I can buck up against the whole German army." This was characteristic of the man. He was always full of enthusiasm and courage, ready to do a man's share; and knowing him as we do, we know that during those days of July and August, he was doing his "bit" and doing it well.

On the arrival of his relatives from the United States a memorial service will be held in the Baptist church, Falkland Ridge, the church of which he was a faithful and consistent member.
