> Why Catarriozone Cures Catarrh. It goes to every affected part and kills the germs that keep up the diseased condition. Catarrhozone never irritates, but stimulates the mucous lining of the nose, throat and lungs to normal action, and keeps the nasal passages free from offensive discharges. Catarrhozone contains no dangerous drugs or opiates, and is delightfully pleasant and simple to use. Catarrhozone is an absolutely certain cure for any form of Catarrh and sells for one dollar at druggists, small size 25c. By mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Smorgasbord. The Swedes use the smorgasbord as a whet for dinner or supper. The smorgasbord consists of a side table furnished with bits of fish, ham, meat-and other things. The fish is nearly sure to be raw. You may eat it in morsels. with hard boiled eggs or with oatcake or bread. There are also butter and cheese and pickles, and you are supposed to vary the entertainment with one or two glasses of corn brandy-a very different spirit to cognac-which may be contained in vessels like tea urns, with taps needing to be turned.

Anglo-Saxons at first acquaintance are prone to imagine that it is all the meal. In this matter I have heard a gentle waitress reproach a countryman of mine inferentially in a way that ought to have staggered his heart. The ignorant gentleman went from one ittle dish to another and, like a swarm of locusts, left nothing in his track.

He also tossed off the thimblefuls of corn brandy as if they had been so much lemonade. "Monsieur," murmured the girl at length, "your dinner is ready." And she pointed to his soup, which smoked for him at the dining table proper.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its states, and recently secured a cab and horse and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure entered into competition with the Jeis the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient health and strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. Somerville's King St. * AARON BURR'S DAUGHTER.

A Plausible Story of the Fate of the Beautiful Theodosia. An old resident of Washington said in a recent conversation: "The fate of Theodosia, the beautiful daughter of Aaron Burr, has been one of the appalling mysteries of sudden disappearances at sea. "She was married to Covernor Allston of South Carolina, a name distinguished in the annals of that state. She sailed from Charleston for New York in the ship Patriot on Dec. 20, 1812, on a visit to her father. The vessel was supposed to have been either ingulfed or captured by pirates, for it was thought that no soul had survived to determine the awful doubt as to its fate or that of its passengers. One account particularly arrested public attention, and that was the purported confession of a pirate, Domnick You, which Charles Gayarre incorporated into his brilliant, romantic, philosophic 'Ferdinand de Lemos.' It is so graphically drawn that many persons thought at last the fate of Aaron Burr's only daughter was known. "An old sallor named Benjamin F. Burdick died recently a pauper in a Michigan poorhouse. On his deathbed he made the startling confession that he was one of the piratical crew that captured a vessel named the Patriot and participated in the murder of Theodosia Allston at sea. Indeed, he declared that it fell to his lot to pull the plank from under her. She came forth arrayed in white, holding a Bible in one hand and with heroic mien took her place on the slender instrument of death and without a shudder or quiver of a muscle was precipitated into the waves. The noble, unblanched face, erect and airy form, he said, had baunted him all his subsequent life. The date of the vessel's loss, January, 1813, was correctly given by Burdick, and the name 'Odessa' Burr Allston was his only error, and yet this was not an error, for the name of both father and husband are sufficient identification. The corruption of Theodosia into 'Odessa' would be natural to an ignorant sailor and, if anything, tend to prove that he had not been reading up to make himself a sort of deathbed hero. "At any rate, the confession is plausible for the reason named."

Animals Gave Warning. Several hours before the recent earthquake took place in Guatemala a French traveler was taking breakfast at the house of a merchant in Quezaltenango when suddenly a curious thing happened. The fountain in the courtyard ceased to flow, and from its two orifices came sharp, intermittent sounds. The birds in the aviary, which had been singing merrily, became silent, and two dogs and a cat which were in the room betraved unmistakable signs of terror. Hastily rising from the table, the merchant said, "We must hurry away from here, for the animals plainly warn us that some terrible disaster Strain of High Speed. The question has been raised whether, if it should be practicable to attain to a speed of 100 miles or more an hour by rail, the engineer could stand the strain, says the Philadelphia Record. It has been affirmed by a physician that such fearful going would wear out his nerves in a little while. The question has been answered already by one experienced engineer before a meeting of scientists. Asked as to the probable effects in case of a common accident of a speed of more than sixty miles an hour, he said: "A smashup at sixty miles an hour would make splinters of everything. At 100 miles the splinters might be finer, but the destruction could not be more complete"-that is to say, when an engineer runs his engine at sixty miles he is under as severe a strain as he would be at any other speed.

A Woman "Cabby." In the New Zealand town of Nelson woman has been asserting her rights in quite a new direction A local lady hus of the town, who at once took alarm and protested that she had no license. This difficulty was quickly overcome, and the lady "cabby" entered the lists on equal terms in that respect. Now with her smart turnout she is securing all the fares she can find time to drive.

The Pen Paramount. A supreme court justice, a diplomatist and a writer were talking of the extent of the influence wielded by each, and the New York Times justly credits the last laugh to the writer. "I can govern by injunctions, as the Populists put it," said the judge. "I can involve nations in war," said the embassador. "And I could, if I would, make the world laugh at both of you," said the writer. The Ways of the Turk. Baedeker's is generally regarded as a harmless book. Not so in Turkey, as a German traveler has learned to his grief. They found in his trunk a guide through Turkey and confiscated it. The next morning the Baedeker was returned to the German, but with more than a hundred pages, containing a description of Constantinople, torn out. The traveler went to the censor's office to complain of this inexplicable treatment of his book. But the censor explained to him with irresistible logic that an accurate description of Constantinople could not be suffered, since a knowledge of the locality was calculated to facilitate an attempt on the

WANTED HER CHANGE.

Why This Married Man Has Quit Trying to Solve the Problem. "The other day," said the man with the tired look, "my wife and I were due to run over to Baltimore to attend the wedding of an old bacheler pal of mine who took it into his head to jump off late in life. I had a lot of work to attend to at the office that morning. and so I told my wife before starting for the office that I'd meet her down town at any place she named. She named one of the F street department stores-said that she had to buy a piece of neck ribbon-and I told her I'd pick her up there about twenty minutes before train time, so's to give us ample time to make the station.

"I was about four minutes late inmaking the department store, owing to my immersion in the stack of work on my desk, and so I was in a good deal of a lather when I galloped into the store. I found my wife standing in front of the ribbon counter looking werried.

"'I'm waiting for my change,' she said.

"'Well,' said I, 'we've got to hustle; we've only got about eleven minutes now to make the station.' "'But,' said she, 'I can't leave my change can I? "'What's the matter with | your change? How long've you been waiting for it?' I asked her.

"'About ten minutes,' she answered. The trolley thing that sends you back your change has got out of order, but they're fixing it, and I'll have my change in a minute.' "I was, as I say, in a good deal of a steam, but I had it doped out that perhaps she had given the saleswoman a bill of considerable size, and I felt that there was nothing to do but be patient and wait till the change trolley got fixed, although I was pretty busy looking at my watch. "Well, after a wait of five minutes the trolley got in running shape again, and then about two minutes later the little box came a-sliding our way, the saleswoman opened it up and dumped the contents into her hand and then handed over to my wife-well, what d'ye suppose?-a cent, one little, measly, common, onnery, trifling, frivolous, no account one penny piece! That was her 'change!'

"We missed the train and had to take one an hour later, and we got over to Baltimore about half an hour after my old pal had been tied up in his little knot.
