

In Loving Memory.

(To the Editor)

Dear Sir:—Will you please insert the following in your paper, The Advocate, in loving memory of our dear brother, in the person of Joe Hicks, who passed peacefully away to the Great Beyond on March 23rd, after a brief illness of fifteen days.

Deceased had been suffering from a heavy cold for a short time, but thinking he had perfectly recuperated, he attended a tea held by the L. S. A. (of which he was a much interested member) after which, we are sorry to say, a second attack followed and the result proved fatal.

Deceased was 24 years and his death has been a hard blow to his family and friends, the latter being many, as he was a very bright companion. The funeral took place on the 26th. There was a large attendance of L. O. A., besides numerous friends. Deceased leaves to mourn a widowed mother, two sisters and four brothers. It seems hard for such a bright young man to be taken from amongst us, but we know that God's ways are not our ways, and that the Good Book says, "In the midst of life we are in death." May the Lord comfort the mourners and impart to their dear ones the assurance of meeting their dear one with a glorious greeting in that better land, never more to part.

They die in Jesus, and are blest; How calm their slumbers are! From sufferings and from woes released, And freed from every snare.

"Thill that illustrious morning come, When all Thy saints shall rise, And decked in full immortal bloom, Attend Thee to the skies."

OBITUARY

(To the Editor.)

BERTHA ABBOTT.

Dear Sir:—Please allow me space in your most notable paper the Advocate to record the death of a little girl, Bertha Abbott, of Doting Cove. She was sick a fortnight. The Lord wanted her young life in his Kingdom, so he called her from this earth away. She was 11 years, 11 months, and leaves to mourn her sad loss a father, mother, one sister, and a large circle of friends to whom we extend our deepest sympathy. She was a member of the Sunday School and also the week day school, and was a bright cheerful girl, and was loved by all who knew her. She was laid to rest in the Methodist Cemetery on March 3rd.

"Go home my friends and shed no tears,
I must rest here till Christ appears;
Short was my life, long be my rest,
Christ took me home when he thought best."

No more the pleasant child is seen,
To please its parents eyes,
The tender plant, so fresh and green,
Is in eternity.

MARY JANE HUSSEY.

Dear Sir:—Will you please allow me another space in your valuable paper to record the death of another young person, Mary Jane Hussey, who died after a few days illness, passing peacefully away to the Great Beyond on March 21st, 1919, leaving to mourn father, mother, and two sisters. Deceased was 16 years of age.

Why do we mourn departed friends,
Or start at deaths alarm,
It is the voice that Jesus sends,
To call us to his arms.

When we leave this world of changes,
When we leave this world of care,
We shall meet our missing loved one,
In the Father's mansion fair.

Thou art gone from this vain world,
Never more to see thy face,
But we hope to meet in Heaven,
In that bright and happy place.

A FRIEND.

SUSIE TROWBRIDGE.

Dear Sir:—Will you insert the following in your esteemed paper the Advocate in loving memory of Susie Trowbridge, who passed peacefully away to the Great Beyond on March 20th, after a few days illness. Her death was caused by a heavy cold. The deceased was 12 years. As the bible tells us "In the midst of life we are in death." She leaves to mourn a father, mother, one sister and four brothers. May God comfort the mourners.

"Susie darling, thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel,
But we bow in deep submission,
To our Heavenly Father's will."

Your father and your mother,
Find it lonely in their home,
But we trust you are in Heaven,
And the Lord's will must be done.

No more sleepless nights, dear Susie,
No more weary hours of pain,
But we hope to meet in Heaven,
And their loss is but your gain.

You are gone, but not forgotten,
Never shall your memory fade,
You are resting now in Heaven,
In that bright and happy place.

You sleep beside your sister,
Both are gone to fairer clime,
And your name in love is written,
On the hearts that are left behind.

Your school mates they will miss you,
But your days on earth are o'er,
And I hope some day they'll meet you,
On that happy golden shore.

CHAPTER IX.

Eight Hours in German Hands.

This was the riddle that forced itself upon the peasant mind. It was complicated by a hundred other suggestions that were injected into his brain from various channels. Depressed in spirit, discouraged and sullen in appearance was the Russian soldier in February, 1917.

We returned to our positions and took up the heavy burden. It was not long before an attack was organised against the German line. Our artillery again displayed little effectiveness and again we climbed out of the trenches and swept across No Man's Land while the enemy's wire defenses were intact. It was not the first wave of Russian breasts that had beaten itself in vain against that parapet of death, to be hurled back with grave losses without even coming to grips with the foe. But each of those waves had left its quantity of bitterness in the hearts of the survivors. And it was a particularly leavening dose of bitterness that this last futile attack had left in the souls of the soldiers of our sector.

Nevertheless, in February, 1917, the front was unprepared for the eruption that was to shake the world soon. The front maintained its fierce hatred for the Germans and could conceive of no righteous peace otherwise than through the efficient organization of a gigantic offensive against the enemy. In the way of such an offensive was the unreasonable Government. Against this Government were directed the indignation and suppressed dissatisfaction of the rank and file. But so old, so stable, so deep-rooted was the institution of Tsarism that, with all their secret contempt for the Court, with all the hidden hatred for the officials of the Government, the armies at the front were not ripe yet for a conscious and deliberate rising.

CHAPTER X.

The Revolution at the Front.

The first swallow to warn us of the approaching storm was a soldier from our Company who had returned from a leave of absence at Petrograd. "Oh, my! If you but knew, boys, what is going on in the rear! Revolution! Everywhere they talk of overthrowing the Tsar. The capital is aflame with revolution."

These words spread like wildfire among the men. They gathered in knots and discussed the possibilities of the report. Would it mean peace? Would they get land and freedom? Or would it mean another huge offensive before the end of the war? The arguments, of course, took place in whispers, behind the backs of the officers. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that revolution meant preparation for a general attack against the Germans to win a victory before the conclusion of peace.

For several days the air was charged with electricity. Everybody felt that earth-quaking events were taking place and our hearts echoed the distant rumblings of the raging tempest. There was something reticent about the looks and manners of the officers, as if they kept important news to themselves.

Finally, the joyous news arrived. The Commander gathered the entire Regiment to read to us the glorious words of the first manifesto, together with the famous Order No. 1. The miracle had happened! Tsarism, which enslaved us and thrived on the blood and marrow of the toiler, had fallen. Freedom, Equality and Brotherhood! How sweet were these words to our ears! We were transported. There were tears of joy, embraces, dancing. It all seemed a dream, a wonderful dream. Who ever believed that the hated regime would be destroyed so easily and in our own time?

The Commander read to us the manifesto, which concluded with a fervent appeal to us to hold the line with greater vigilance than ever, now that we were free citizens, to defend our newly won liberty from the attacks of the Kaiser and his slaves. Would we defend our freedom? A multitude of throats shouted in a chorus, that passed over No Man's Land and reverberated in the German trenches. "Yes, we will!"

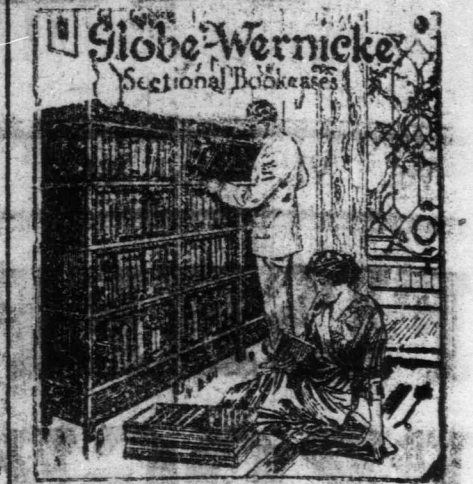

"Would we swear allegiance to the Provisional Government, which wanted us to prepare to drive the Germans out of Free Russia before we returned home to divide the land?"

"We swear!" thundered thousands of men, raising their right hands, and thoroughly alarming the enemy.

Then came Order No. 1, signed by the Petrograd Soviet of Workmen and Soldiers. Soldiers and officers were now equal, it declared. All the citizens of the Free Russia were equal henceforth. There would be no more discipline. The hated officers were enemies of the people and should no longer be obeyed and kept at their posts. The common soldier would now rule the army. Let the rank and file elect their best men and institute committees; let there be Company, Regimental, Corps and Army committees.
