LORD ST. LEONARDS.

The Disgraced Baron Threatens to Insult on Being Tried by his Peers.

LONDON, May 17, 1884.—Lord St. Leonards, who was arrested last week on the charge of having attempted to assault a maid servant of his lordship and was refused bail and confined in the House of Detention at Clerkenwell, demands that he shall be tried by his peers. This demand creates some difficulty in disposing of his case. It was long ago decided, to be sure, that a peer's privileges could be ignored in cases of indictable offences. But several cases have occurred more recently which render this precedent of doubtful force, and are, at any rate, sufficient to justify the claim set up by his lordship.

DESERVED BY FRIENDS.

Lord St. Leonards became a daily more obnoxious. He has up to date been unable to raise money enough to pay for the prison luxuries which he has ordered and consumed, and his friends are fast deserting him as they become convinced of the profound rascality of his act. The eminent solicitors who went from London to his assistance when he was first arrested have been unable to soften the enraging magistrate into accepting bail, and the friends who at first rushed to his rescue with offers of bonds have withdrawn all interest in the case. It is questionable if the noble Lord could today secure bail money if he were allowed. St. Leonards seems absolutely deserted by all his friends, and he now threatens to revenge himself upon the nobility for his outcast state.

A DREADFUL THREAT.

His latest threat was made to Lady. He declares that unless he is rescued from his present "disgraceful position" he will claim his privilege as a Baron to be tried by his peers. This is a potent threat. If carried out successfully in this case it would certainly result in popular outcry which might prove irresistible for the abolition of all such remaining antiquated privileges of the Lords. The last time this particular privilege was claimed was by Lord Castellan, the hero of Balaclava, when he was arraigned for manslaughter for causing the death of his opponent in his celebrated duel. The tenure of the British aristocracy is sufficiently frail without being further jeopardized by this threatened attack, and it is reported that efforts will be made to change the determination of the criminal.

A BURGARS LOVE-MAKING.

(San Francisco Post.)
It has often been said that nothing else business success and money constitutes a claim to social recognition on this coast but, as even with such illustration of that fact as the Sharon trial before them, our Eastern friends can hardly understand how absolute said rule is here, we can hardly expect the following perfectly true incident to be believed out of our own state:

One night not long ago the daughter of one of our best citizens was awakened by a noise in her room, and, upon sitting up, discovered a man disguised in a black mask standing beside her bed and calmly contemplating her features by the aid of a bull's-eye lantern.

"Don't be alarmed, Miss, he said; 'I haven't taken anything yet.'"

"Bless me!" said the girl; "I do believe it's a burglar."

"Of course it is," said the housebreaker, with an ungratifying smile, as he lit a cigarette. "And I am proud of it."

"What do you want?" demanded the young lady.

"Well, I did want to sample your jewelry case," said the robber, "but you looked so all-fired pretty lying there with your auburn hair—just my style—that I couldn't help waking you to see if you also had black eyes."

"Well, I have," said the young lady, glancing at the mirror. "But I must look a fright in this dress."

"On the contrary, white is very becoming to you," said the disciple of Jimmy Hope, tenderly. "By the way, are you engaged?"

"That's telling," said the girl.

"No, but are you—honest Injun?"

"Well, yes, I am—a young lawyer; but I don't care for him so very much."

"He's poor, isn't he?"

"Oh, awfully."

"Exactly," I thought as much. Now, my dear girl, don't you know there is nothing in this love-in-cottage business? You don't want to peg along nursing babies in some stuffy back room for the next ten years, do you?"

"N-n-o," murmured the girl.

"Then why not let this fellow slide and take me? I'm pretty comfortably fixed. Business has been good this season, and our profits are large. Our firm is now running a tunnel under a Marysville bank, and I've got a fourth interest. Besides, I am secretary of the Burglars Protective Association. What d'yer say?"

"Couldn't he go ahead next summer?" asked the girl thoughtfully.

"Why, certainly. I expect to have to, just think over the matter, and I'll drop in some night later in the week. I know how to get in." And, shouldering his kit, the secretary stepped out of the window and went off to open a jewelry store for an engagement ring.

SWELL CONTINUES.

How French Actresses Dress When they are about to be tried.

Lady Hooper writes enthusiastically of the costumes worn by French actresses from whom we are said to obtain our fashions. "Oh, you go! and little fishes!" she says, "what lovelies these French actresses wear when they get about it!" Mrs. Hooper describes several of the costumes: "In the second act Mlle. Bart's walking dress is pale gray silk with a skirt front and a vest in dark gray silk guipure, and the whole set off with revers of white velvet, was lovely to behold and the perfection of quiet and costly elegance. It entirely eclipsed Mrs. Pearson's morning dress in transparent white lace with a bouffant lace-trimmed collar and cuffs, and forming the loose, shapeless sleeves."

A prettier stage costume than the one described by Mrs. Hooper was presented in Boston lately, when Mme. Nilsson and Frau Materna stood together at the last Wagner concert. Mme. Nilsson was dignified and elegant in dark blue silk and velvet, the velvet being arranged in panels and edged with brilliant bead fringe. The square neck corsage was finished with a wide white lace collar, deep as a cape behind, but narrow in front. Diamonds glittered in the lace in ornaments of different varieties, in crescents and stars massed together or dropping like dewdrops from the dazzling flowers. Materna was bright in a yellow satin dress trimmed with green, the colors being of the marsh marigold with green leaves. The front of the dress was covered with embroidered lace and the corsage was also trimmed with lace. Both ladies wore long silk gloves of delicate lace. Some of the dresses imported from Paris are more adaptable to every day existence. A pretty suit, said to be for country wear, is of plain gray velveteen and gray veiling embroidered with red flowers. The skirt is of plain velveteen and plaited lengthwise. A drape of the embroidered velveteen forms the apron, which falls very long. The waist is of embroidered velveteen, the front of which opens over a plain vest. Down the front around the waist is a lace ruffle and the crown is covered with roses and ribbon loops. Embroidery is as popular as ever and yet has not lost its favor. The new lawns, muslins and pongees appear profusely decorated with embroidery. Scarcely a black dress outside of mourning is fashionable without its share of jet trimming. Many stylish little wraps are all of jet and ribbon like are worn. The principal wraps to stile are the shawl capes with effect of high sleeves. Some pelermans are tied in front.

THE DYNAMITE WAR.

The Paris correspondent of the Standard gives an account of some interviews which he says he has had with Irishmen who profess to know the plans of the Irish revolutionaries. According to the correspondent (who, of course, does not vouch for the truth of what is told him), before long, by dynamite, the knife and other means the English people will be so terrified that they will be only too glad to grant Ireland an independent government. An embassy of the extreme section of the Clan-na-Gael has arrived in Paris from New York, with instructions to put a cruiser, which he said, is to be provided with torpedoes; secondly, that Tynan, the mysterious Number One, is expected within two months in Paris where he is to consult with McGeffer, and direct his coming dynamite and dagger campaign.
