Thank fortune the drummer season is over, and business men are no longer pestered with the nuisance. There is a good deal of complaints by these characters when they come here, that they are obliged to pay taxes: but the city is well justified in the stand it has taken in this regard. And some of the drummers complain of sharp treatment by Sergeant Woodward, but the Sergeant knows well with whom he is dealing; that many of them are Jewish characters whose only care is to dodge the law. Let the Sergeant not lay aside his vigilance.

Several persons in Fredericton have developed a wonderful appetite for making cartoons of late. During the seat of Government craze, Mr. Dan Elliott produced some extensions of late. Then Evangelist Charton was here one day, he got a toad, and took it down to the sand bank where he used to delude the cels. He laid the animal dearn on a bed of soft fine sand, and taking a twig traced round the form of the animal. The picture was unjuerb! Of course this is not intended for a criticism, as it is the easiest things are world to spoil a picture when one close had said that there was a cout and try to sketch Dixer's Hill—nobody here knows where that is—on the side of the brown walls. He never could make it a bit more like said hill, than the red and black paint, and the leather car on the canvass uptown is like a man. As a religious undertaking, however, that chromo is a gem, worth farmore in gold than the weight of the great hemore hock frame which bounds it. It is a hugetribute to the piety and the humility of the photographers to put it in their window. But suppose some day they were asked to hang up in their window a sheep-skin which some deluded christain might regard as a splendid representation of the Ascension, would they put it up?

Penniless people who wanted to see the sights, baseball, cricket, etc., without paying, were disappointed unless they managed to climb the fences. The women, be it understood, did this sort of thing, too.

The races at Moosepath attracted a great many, but the chief attraction of the day was the excursion to Portland land. The fare was cheap and thousands took the opportunity to catch a few mouthfuls of nice fresh air. Seventation of the Ascension, would they put it there was a meetin
