The Poet's Corner.

A Flower for the Boad. You placed this flower in her hand, you say? This pure, pale rose, in her hand of clay? Methinks could she lift her scaled eyes, would meet your, own with a grieve

She has been your wife for many a year, When clouds hung low and when skies our feet she laid her life's glad spring, her summer's gierious blossoming.

If its warm love waned as the years went or If it chilled in the grasp of an icy spell, What was the reason? I pray you tell.

gunnot? I can, and beside her bler, all must speak, and your soul must hear a was not all that she might have been. I was the sorrow—yours the sin!

Whose was the fault if she did not gr Like a rose in the summer? Do you know? Does a tily grow when its leaves are chilled? Does it bloom when its root is winter-killed?

For a little while, when you first were wed, Your love was like sunshine round her shed; Then a something crept between you two, You led where she could not fellow you. With a man's firm tread you went and cam You lived for power, for wealth, for fame; Shut into her woman's work at d waya, She ht a. d the nation chant your praise.

But, ah! You had dropped her hand the whi What time had you for a kiss, a smile? You two, with the same roof overhead, Were as far apart as the sundered dead.

You in your manhood's strength and prime; She-worn and faded before her time. Tis a common story. This rose, you say,
Y is id in her pallid h and, to-day? When did you give her a flower before

Yet stay a moment; you'll wed again; I mean no reproach; 'tis the way of me But I pray you think when some fairer face Shines like a star from her wonted place, That love will starve if it is not fed.

That true hearts pray for their daily bread.

TWO WAYS OF LOOKING AT THINGS.

Too boys went to hunt grapes. One was happy because they found grapes. the other was unhappy because the grapes had seeds in them. Two men being convalescent were ask

A servant thinks a man's house is principally kitchen. A guest, that it is principally rather. A guest, that it is principally parlor.

"I am sorry that I live," says one man. "I am sorry that I must die," says another.
"I am glad," says one, "that it is no worse." "I am sorry," says another, "that it is no better." One man counts everything that he has a gain. Another counts everything lse than he receives a loss. One man spoils a good repast by thinkone manapoles a good repast of another. Another enjoys a poor repast by contrasting it with none at all.

One man is than ful for his blessings.

Another is morose for his misfortunes.

One man thinks he is entitled to a better world, and is dissatisfied because he hasn't got it. Another thinks he is not justly entitled to any. and is satisfied with this. One man makes up his accounts from his wants. Another from his assets.

A Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, Is as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. When the blood does not contain the usual quantity of Iron, the deficiency can be supplied by the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. It cures a "thousand PEROVIAN SYRUP. It cures a "thousand ills" simply by Toning UP, Invigorating, and Viralizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon. This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing
