Wagner Recital

It is only after hearing a recital such as was given last night in the Central Methodist church that one begins to appreciate fully what a heritage Richard Wagner left to humanity as a remembrance of his art. The width and grandeur of his music is colossol, while his love passages are sweet and exquisitely beautiful. Last night's programme included selections from "Tannhauser," Tristan and Iscole Rienzi, "Lohengrin," etc. Miss Florence Bruce's rendering of "Oft when the hours are lonely" was especially fine, while Mr. Wilber Horner's voce was well adapted for his "Awake."

Mr. W. V. Oaten is to be heartily congratulated on his place as organist and the choir did splendid work throughout the entire program. The whole recital was something to remember, and was a credit to Calgary which is fast becoming a musical centre of no mean repute.

THE HEART DEPARTMENT

By Laura Jean Libbey.

FORGETTING HER ADDRESS

In families where there are young folks there's sure to be a heap of trouble about their Mayday flitting. The daughters who have prospective sweethearts try to prevail upon their parents not to move because of their popularity in that neighborhood. The daughters who have no beaux are equally as insistent to flit to strange scenes and pastures new, where they may make new acquaintances.

Many a young man will call upon a girl if she lives close at hand. But it is quite another matter if she moves a distance away and it is far beyond walking distance. Of course the girl has given him the new address, but his memory may be treacherous. And by the time that he has made up his mind to call he falls entirely to locate her.

Even the most anxious of young women often forget to give the postman the new address, thus depriving the young man of the only way by which he might find her. The poor girl watches for the one who does not come until hope grows weary in her heart and she forces herself to believe that it is "out of sight, out of mind" with him.

Warm days roll around almost before he is aware. By that time it has occurred to him that some of her friends will know where the family has moved to. He finds to his annoyance that withthe first warm days they have hied themselves to seashore or country. Of course the girl knows his business as well as his home address. Yet pride keeps her from writing him. Her folks say, "Why, he knows the way, and if he wants to see you he will come. You shouldn't think of worrying about him."

Cupid sees to it that lovers who are intended for each other should not play at hide and seek for long. He has a trick of letting them run across each other at picnics or park, or mayhap on the street, and of course the young man will be careful to jot down the address next time and not trust to his memory for the number of street or location.

By next flitting times girls are wiser. Not only do they have the young man put down the number in his book or on a card, but they take the postman into their confidence. He is only too pleased to be the go-between of earnest sweethearts who would send their winged thoughts and hopes across the space which separates them.

Thousands of young men and women whose friendship was just beginning to bud into deeper meaning have been lost to each other for all time by their failure to remember addresses. If a young woman has reason to fear that this may be the case with some young man who was eager to have her give him her new address, she might strain a point of etiquette by sending him a post card showing some favorite view of the place where she is stopping. Should he fail to respond to the little token of her interest in him, she has done all that a modest girl can do to renew his acquaintance, which she found pleasant.

There is no place like a great city for people to drop out of sight. There are some families who do not find their surroundings congenial and move again and yet again ere they find a homelike place. Under such circumstances girls often lose the old friends and are constantly making new ones.

Of course, May flittings have, on the other hand, their advantages. Acquaintances whom one does not find pleasant may be dropped from the list. But, taking it all in all, it is not an advantage for the girls in a family to always be in a strange neighborhood. Parents should look at this side of the situation. It's a good way to keep girls single. We have all heard of what happens to the rolling stone. It gathers no moss.

Heart Department.

Dear Miss Libby,—Through reading your always good advice in The Morning Albertan, I have determined to write, not regarding love affairs, but about something more important. I am going to spend my holidays among very fashionable people, and as I have been brought up in the country I have had very little social life, so perhaps you will help me. (1) Are hats worn at luncheon, also gloves? (2) Are gloves worn at a dinner party, where evening dress is worn? (3) What is worn when playing golf, or at golf teas? (4) When an invitation has been given, viz.: "Spend part of your holidays with us," no time stipulated, which I think is a mistake for any hostess to be guilty of, how can I determine the length of my visit? Thanking you, I am, yours, IGNORAMUS.

Hats and gloves are worn at a luncheon, and gloves are also worn at dinner. When playing golf, a simple waist or a middy blouse with a plain skirt is the most suitable costume. Tea is usually served on the links and no extra adornment is needed for that, as it merely consists of refreshments after play. I understand the difficulty of not knowing just how long you are supposed to stay with your friends, and would advise you to suggest a period, which could be lengthened at the invitation of your hostess.

SAWMILL PURCHASED BY HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY HERE

Will Make Interior Fittings for Many Large Stores Being Built in the West

The Hudson's Bay company this week closed a deal for the purchase of the sawmill of the Calgary Woodworkers limited in East Calgary. The price paid was in the neighborhood of $50,000. The mill has already started work and several men are employed making interior fittings which will be used for the various stores which the company is building in Calgary, Winnipeg, and the additions at Edmonton and Victoria. It is expected that there will be enough work to keep the mill going for over three years as the various stores will require a great amount of interior fittings, in Calgary alone it is said they will be worth $200,000. This is practically a new industry in the city as the sawmill closed down about two months ago.

POISON IN POTATO OF A KINDLY NATURE

Beneficerit Ptomaines Discovered in Tuber by English Savant

"Poison in the potato" is an alarming caption, but consumers of the "murphy" may set their minds at rest. According to a writer in The Lancet, the poison in question has more of a beneficial than a maleficent action.

Though the poisonous alkaloid and glucoside known as solanine is a normal constituent of the healthy potato, references to toxicological literature fail to furnish any decisive evidence that the tuber has caused any widespread or serious illness. In these days when alarming symptoms of poisoning may sometimes be traced to food in which, for some mysterious reason, the poisons known as ptomaines have elaborated themselves, it is just as well when searching for the fons et origo mali not to forget the potato, for under certain conditions solanine may be found in unusual quantity, and this alkaloid may set up the usual disturbances which are characteristic of an irritant poison. I nthe normal potato the amount seldom exceeds 0.01 per cent., but this may easily be exceeded in the diseased potato.

It appears to occur in larger proportion in the peel, so that there may be reasons for avoiding the "jacket." Though not very soluble in water, it is probable that boiling removes some of the alkaloid. As already stated, however, there is little in toxicological records which amounts to a serious indictment against the potato and the small doses which occur are stated by some authorities to be an excellent sedative, more efficacious in long-standing neuralgia, especially when neuritis is present, than either antipyrine or antifebrin.

The English savant adds that oftentimes a judicious diet of potatoes would be of greater benefit to a good many self-physicking people than a dose of some antipyretic substance which they regard as adapted to relieve all headaches, whatsoever their origin.

CATCHES TYPHOID IN EXPERIMENT; FATAL

Mount Vernon, May 23.—James Harrison Rogers, is dead in the Lawrence hospital at Bronxville from typhoid fever, which he contracted in an unusual way.

Mr. Rogers was a student in civil and sanitary engineering at the New York university and was to have been graduated next month. He was 21 years old. In a special course two weeks ago he was experimenting in the laboratory of the college with pathogenic germs. It is believed that one of the germs was on his hand and that when he rubbed his finger across his mouth the germ entered his system.

At first he thought he had malaria, but it later developed into typhoid and he was removed to the hospital. All efforts to save him were in vain.

FINE ARTS GET SOME ATTENTION FROM EXHIBITION

Sixty-Eight Departments in the Arts Section; Amateur and Professional Cared for Professional and amateur artists will find in the premium list of the Calgary exhibition that considerable attention has been given the fine arts section, which deals with their particular accomplishment. There are 68 classes in the department, and in it are included the paintings, carvings, photography, and kindred arts. The work shown in both amateur and professional classes must have been produced in western Canada, and the work of the professionals must be original in design and execution. Amateurs are understood to be those who do not paint or teach for a living, or habitually sell or offer for sale their productions.

Ther are five classes in which amateurs and professionals will compete, together in paintings and drawings, which include oils and water colors, as well as crayon and pastel. InChina decorations amateurs and professionals again meet in competition, but in all the other departments the amateurs will have the field to themselves. These include oil paintings, water colors, black and white, photography, painting on silk, satin, and bolting cloth, stencilling, carving, pyrography, basket making, brass work and some of the classes of the china decoration section.

Particulars of the various classes can be obtained from the premium list, which will be forwarded to all interested by applying to Manager Richardson, at the fair grounds. The art display at the approaching exhibition will undoubtedly be an interesting one, as considerable attention has been paid to working up a suitable list of premiums. W. M. Davidson is the director in charge.

ITALIAN DISCOVERS WIRELESS TELEPHONE

And Therewith Puzzles the Wireless Installation Officials

Geneva, May 24.—During the last fortnight the wireless installations around Lake Geneva, from the fort of St. Maurice, over 3,000 feet high, above Sion, to this city, have been puzzled by receiving fragments of personal conversation and portions of waltzes, such as "The Merry Widow," the Italian national hymn, etc.

Today the mystery is explained. Signor Roberto Galetti, an italian civil engineer, has discovered, after many years of experiments, the wireless telephone. He has established stations at Lausanne, and to amuse a friend, the Italian engineer places a phonograph in front of the "wireless phone," and hence "The Merry Widow" was heard in the Alps.

"THE FAITHFUL FOX" IS FUTURE PET

Reynard to Supersede Dog in Berlin, Because Licenses Are Much Too Dear Now

Berlin, May 24.—The raising of the dog tax in Berlin by 30 per cent—from $7.50 to $10—has given rise to considerable complaints in this capital of a dog-loving country, and has also ber of dogs kept. Foxes, however, are not included in the taxation regulations, hence the advertisement appearing this week in one of the newspapers offering young foxes as substitutes for dogs. At present the price is only $1.82.

While the fox is to take the place of the dachshund, the omnibus horse, which pulls the Berlin horse bus along at such a gentle pace that the vehicle is certainly the pleasantest of all such vehicles to travel in, is going to be displaced by the mule. The Berlin omnibus company recently imported three teams of mules from South America. They have found they thereby save as much as 25 per cent in fodder, while obtaining just as good a team. The animals are also less liable to disease and are more enduring. The high cost of $300 per animal has, therefore, not deterred the company from placing an order for a hundred more in Argentina.

BRYAN'S FLEET MOVE RAPPED BY EDITOR

London, May 23.—The Standard, in commenting on the forthcoming cruise of the American fleet to the Mediterranean, says:

"It is significant that this remarkable illustration of the potentialities of the second naval power of the world is to be given in a quarter now undergoing reconstruction and political transition. It is a very forcible hint to Europe that American diplomacy can assert itself if it pleases with the only kind of backing our modern diplomatists really recognize.

"It is also a curious commentary on that effusive patronage and pacific idea Secretary of State Bryan has been exhibiting. It is extremely kind of Secretary Bryan to take the trouble to advertise his desire to inaugurate an era of universal peace, although it might be supposed that his energies are better employed in applying his ideas to such matters as Japan and Panama.

"The most practical method of supporting the principle of international morality would be to maintain the validity of an international agreement"

ALLEGE ONE STRAY "IF" COST COMPANY $1,405

Tacoma, Wash., May 23.—Because in transmission over the telegraph wire it is alleged that $5,605 became $5,60, the Wheeler-Osgood company began suit in superior court to collect $1,405 from the Western Union Telegraph company. The Wheeler-Osgood firm, the complaint sets forth, lost that amount on a contract for doors because the telegram was garbled. The $5,605 represented the price for an allotment of doors. The telegraph company's rendition divided this up in the following matter, it is alleged: "$5.60, $5 if doors are inlaid." "If," the complaint says, should have been the beginning of another sentence.
