CEYLON TEA

The funeral of Lord Rhysworth was an event long remembered in the county. There was not one present whose heart did not go out in warmest sympathy to the beautiful young wi-

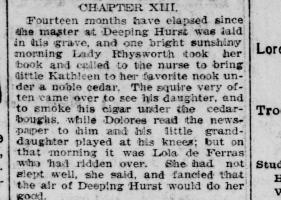

The squire was deeply affected by his old friend's death. "Who would have believed that I should outlive him?" he said, and in his heart he knew that, but for the dead man's generosity and kindness, he would not have been alive.

They burled him in the old family vault, where all the Rhysworths for many generations had slept. When his will was read, it was found that he had left all he could to his wife-Burbage Grange, with an income of five thousand per annum, which at her death was to revert to his daughter Kathleen, together with a large sum of ready money and several valuable investments, which make her wealthy for life. To his beloved daughter he had already given Deerhurst Manor, with two thousand per annum, the money to accumulate until she attained the age of 21.

Deeping Hurst, with its revenues, went to the next of kin, Walter Inv-ing, now Walter, Lord Rhysworth, who was in India, where he held an office under the government. A year at least must elapse before he could come home; so he wrote to Lady Rhysworth asking her as a great favor to remain at Deeping Hurst until he returned to England.

It was a respite to her. She had felt no great or passionate love for her husband, nothing but reverence and kindly affection; but she had been warming attached to him for his goodness and kindness, and she felt his death keenly. She knew that she had lost the truest and best friend it was possible for a woman to have. It was some little comfart and relief to her that she had not to leave Deeping Hurst just then. It was a beautiful home, and she had been very happy there. She was pleased to think that she need not go away with the pain of her loss strong upon her, pleased that baiby Kathleen should take with her, wherever she went, some memory of her father's home. The first three months of her widowhood she passed in total seclusion with her child, and in such tones of approbation." the respect she showed for her husband's memory won for her general approval Sickness and death had somewhat scared Lola. She did not care to go near Deeping Hurst, for the very thought of death was horrible to her. While the three months of rigorous mourning lasted, she wrote frequently to Lady Rhysworth, being always very careful to mention the fact that she had just heand from Sir Karl but she made no attempt to visit her. Only when the Deeping Hurst carriage had been seen in the town did she venture near the place. Dolores was pleased to see her. She was young, and the long isofation had begun to tell upon her. It was cheering to see a bright face and to hear the sound of a laughing voice. Almost her first worlds to Lola were an Invitation to the nursery to see baby Kathleen, and Miss de Ferras' first remark was:

Lady Rhysworth mas pleased to see her. During the last few months they had become better friends. Dolores was so gentle and lovable that Lola could not dislike her; and her ladyship seemed to look down upon her from such a height of calm superiority that there was no longer any rivalry possible between them. Lola felt it so; besides, the friendship of Lady Rhysworth was of great importance to her. She met at Desping Hurst the very best society, society that Madame de Ferras, with her limited means, could not entertain. She enjoyed keenly all the comforts of a luxurious home, the thousand and one things that add to one's enjoyment of life. Nothing pleased Lola more than a visit to Deeping Hurst; so the friendship of Miss de Ferras and Lady Rhys-worth had, ripened all the more since the old feeling of rivalry had been removed. On this fair morning Lola had looked more thoughtful and watched Dolores with more keenness than usual.

"How beautiful the shade of this old cedar is!" she said. "Your ornamental trees are twice as large as ours. just as everything here is twice as beautiful as in any other place. You will be sorry to leave it."

"Yes," answered Dolores, "and from all that I can hear I have not much longer to remain. Lord Rhysworth is expected home at the end of this year."

"I wonder," said Lola, "how you can mention the man's name. Were I in your place, I could not." "Why not?" asked Dolores, smiling.

She was growing more accustomed to Lola's flights of fancy.

"Think of all he will take from you, Dolores.' "It never was mine, and it is by right his own. Why should that annoy me?" "I know it would anger me," rejoined Lolo. "I should do one of two things -either hate or marry him."

"It is not so easy to marry a man," said Dolores.

The words were simple enough, and had no particular meaning, but Lola's face flushed crimson as she heard them. She knew it was not easy to marry whom she would. She changed the subject.

"You are still very young, Dolores." "I am but too cognizant of the fact; why do you remind me of it?"

"Because, if the new Lord Rhysworth should marry, you will be the Dowager Lady Rhysworth. I call that nothing short of a calamity."

"It would not disturb me; besides, he may not marry," returned Dolores.

"Rely upon it that he will. I am sure that Lady Fielden intends him for ldest daughter-she speaks of him her .

Rev. Dr. Philp Writes on His Own Behalf.

[St. Thomas Journal, Oct. 23.] To the Editor of The Journal: Sir,-As there appeared in the Journal last evening a statement that a "writ" had been served upon me regarding a libel suit instituted by Gunner George Barrett, I desire to give to the public the correspondence concerning it. The following note was left at the parsonage yesterday afternoon:

St. Thomas, Oct. 22, 1900. Rev. John Philp: Dear Sir,-Mr. George Barrett has instructed me to sue you for slanders published in church last evening concerning him. Yours_truly, J. A. ROBINSON. To this note I sent by post the following reply the same afternoon:

John A. Robinson, Esq.:

Dear Sir,-I am in receipt of your notification re instructions from Mr. George Barrett to sue me for slander in consequences of statements made in my sermon last evening. It is very evident you were not present to hear for yourself, otherwise I am confident you would have given no countenance to such a charge. My remarks concerning the soldier boys' home-coming were based on the words and appeal of Lords Roberts and Wolseley, that the 'welcome" given to the home-coming soldiers be worthy of the citizens of a Christian country, and especially that it be free from all intemperate tendencies or indulgence. In this connection I referred, in a sentence, to a welcome given on the streets of our city during the past week in honor of one of our brave soldier boys, and trusted that it would not be repeated. I do not suppose Mr. Barrett indulges in drinking. I made no such intima-tion. I do not hold him responsible for the demonstration referred to. As a Christian teacher I felt it my duty to discountenance any such welcome to our noble soldier boys, among whom

Mr. Barrett has a wordny record. I have reason to believe that my attitude is in accord with the convictions not only of the congregation assembled last evening, but of this Christian city. I take it for granted that your in-struction is not an attempt by any party or parties to intimidate me in the discharge of my duty; if so, it would be in vain, but merely to call my attention to an impression made that Mr. Barrett was personally menioned and assailed by me. I regret that he should have received such an impression. I had no such thought, and certainly gave no such utterance. If Mr. Barrett insists on pushing this further, kindly inform me, and such steps as may be needful will be taken. Yours truly, J. PHILP. I desire in justice to Gunner Barrett to say that I received a communication from him yesterday after the above was mailed, in which there is not the slightest intimation or indication of any instructions such as Mr. Robinson states. In his letter, while regretting my reference to the demonstration of Wednesday last, fearing lest his reputation be impaired by it, he disavows all responsibility for proceedings, and says: "I am very sorry the thing occurred-it was no wish of mine whatever to be there." I honor Gunner Barrett for this state-

'No, but a boy would have succeeded to his father's estates, and you need never have left Deeping Hurst."

"I would rather have my daughter." said Dolores, clasping the child to her breast: and Lola laughed.

"Sentiment is delightful, but a large Income is better. Dolores, do you ever think about the future? It seems a strange fate to have married so well, and to have lost your husband so soon. Do you ever think of the future? You have the best part of your life before

"I have not thought of it." answered lovely face flushed and her lips thembled "My only thoughts have been of my sorrow and my beautiful baby have had neither time nor inclination for anything else."

"But he was hardly related to your husband-nothing more than second or third cousin."

"He was hardly a third cousin; but he was the next of kin." replied Lady Rhysworth. "To me it seems just as though he had been my husband's brother. Such a marriage would be an utter impossibility to me."

Lola sighed. She saw that that idea was out of the question, and at once decided upon changing her tactics. "I was merely jesting: of course, you would not marry him. It would not be at all fair of you to monopolize two Lords of Deeping Hurst. Lady Fielden would never allow that."

TRIBESMEN MAKE TROUBLE.

Simla, Oct. 24 .- The government has been obliged to move troops towards the frontier north of Baluchistan, as the Waziri tribesmen are quite getting out of hand.

After many signs of insubordination they robbed the mails and attacked a government servant in the Sahur Tangi, then became more aggressive.

Now a blockade is to be declared, and they will be stopped from having any dealings with British India until they pay the fines demanded of them. If this fails it will probably be necessary to send a punitive expedition into their fastnesses in order to bring them to reason.

OSCAR WILDE A PAUPER. Paris, Oct. 24 .- Oscar Wilde, the poet and playwright, is sick and destitute in a hospital in this city. On Saturday he submitted to a sur-gical operation, that may cost his life. In the event of his recovery to the extent that he can stand the fatigue of travel, he will be taken to Scotland, where friends have offered mm a home. After his losing conflict with the English courts, Wilde made his home in this city. He hoped to rebuild his shattered fortunes, but the fates were against him, and he encountered many hardships. He struggled along until he reached the point of absolute destitution, and then sickness came upon him. Friends of former days sought him out and kept him alive by charities, and finally sent him to the Hospital la Salpetriere, where it was learned that he must undergo an operation.
