EARL'S DENE

"Not quite so loud, please. They will hear you in the house. I speak to you."

"Oh, now, if you like, only we had better get out of the way. You were right when you thought that my aunt would object to my marriage."

"You come, then, to say good-bye? Do not be afraid. I release you. And she higher profoundly."

"Angelique, can you—"

"Good-bye, then," she held out her hand, turned away her head, and sighed more profoundly still. "I declare to you, I do not love me."

"Do you then not love me?"

"She threw him for answer one of those glances through the eyelids in which she excelled."

"Then do not," he replied, "let me hear another word of my being released, unless you fear poverty."

"Hush!"

"Do you think I came to ask you to release me, Angelique? Did you think me so base—so cowardly? Did you think that I would sell you for Earl's Dene?"

"Ah, if it could be! But, no—I cannot consent to be the cause of your ruin."

"Angelique—I shall begin to think that you never really loved me."

"How can you speak so cruelly? You know that I have—that I—"

"Do, in a look."

"Angelique, if you do not love me, it is I that release you. I will let you go, and—"

"But if you do love me, there is only one way in which you can prove your love. I will accept no other."

"If I thought I could really make you happy—could really compensate you for what you lose—"

"Could I be happy without you?"

"I do not deserve so great a sacrifice."

"It is no sacrifice, you think I care a straw for what I lose when I think of what I shall gain? I swear that I will not have Earl's Dene without you. In any case I will refuse it."

"And is all the sacrifice I must call it to be on your side?"

"Do you not sacrifice yourself sufficiently by giving yourself to me?"

"Ah, hush! I will let you go. I cannot find it in my heart to struggle against you—against myself—any longer. I will then be everything to you; my life shall be spent in trying to give you no cause for regret."

"Dearest!" But she did not check him, he, forgetting, as he did, where they were, would have taken her in his arms at once.

"But—I must impose a condition."

"What condition?"

"After all, I am acting selfishly. Whatever you may say, I cannot but know that I am indulging my own heart to my loss. I declare to you, make a sacrifice. I will be your wife—heaven knows how gladly. But I will not, I ought not, unless you promise me this."

"What is it?"

"A reconciliation with one who loves you as Miss Clara must love you is always possible. I will not let you throw away the chance of a happy life. You that my whole life would be spent in misery if I thought I had not done all for you that you will let me do. I would have refused you now if I could have done so, but I could not. But I will make another effort, to refuse you unless you promise that Miss Clara shall not know of our engagement until we are married."

"Hush looked grave, and almost frowned."

"I am sorry you wish this, Angelique. My aunt has a right to know. Besides, to conceal it would look as though I wished to keep Earl's Dene by deceit—by a sort of fraud."

"Of course she must not think that. But I am so afraid—until we cannot be parted what might not happen to part? If Miss Clara is so resolved, what might she not do to you?"

"Of course not. But so many things might happen. You promise, then? Then now I am quite happy."

"But, dearest, there is Monsieur Prosper coming to speak to me. But don't go. Monsieur Prosper, this is Mr. Lester, an old friend of mine. Angelique looked at him and smiled."

"Monsieur, I am charmed. But I would speak with you, Mademoiselle. It is a great pity so charming a young lady should never have been in love."

"Lester started at an extraordinary amount of address. Angelique looked at him and smiled."

"What makes you think I never have been in love with Monsieur Prosper? It is because I have never been in love with you?"

"Because you sing just as if you had no heart, Mademoiselle. That is why, because you, Monsieur, and he passed on to resume his forward at the conductor's desk. Lester smiled in his turn; he felt that he knew better."

Marchmont the following paragraph appeared in the Trumpet:

"Mr. H. Lester, M. P. for Denethorp, has accepted the nomination for the Chiltern Hundreds, Mr. M. Warden, of Denethorp, has issued an address, in which he promises Miss Clara a support of the Government, and will, in case of a contest, be influentially supported. It is not improbable that Mr. Proctor, who unsuccessfully contested the borough at the last general election, will appear once more in the field."

For Angelique! She seemed to have turned out but a female Alaschar after all. The future Mrs. Lester, Earl's Dene, Lady Lester of Earl's Dene, Countess of Denethorp, and heaven knows what besides, was up to find herself Mrs. Lester of nowhere, the wife of a disinherited man, who had not even a profession to fall back upon. Added to this, she had the mortification of seeing that she had been duped most cruelly. Had it not been for her own sake, she would certainly not have married him, for the letter which he had written to his aunt upon his marriage, and which she should not leave London; so that, as it turned out, she had herself made matters worse by causing her husband to think that her nephew had endeavored to deceive her.

Hugh was infinitely distressed, not by the loss of Earl's Dene, but by this final proof that she who had been a mother to him all his life, and who had been a mother to him for ever; for if she had loved him as a mother, he felt towards her as a son, and his marriage, which had been her complete silence. It needed all his happiness in the possession of Angelique, and all the business of having done what was right and honorable, to reconcile him to this great loss. As to Warden, the new member, it was clear, he was now more than ever haunted by the thought, "If it were not for Marie!"

ST. JOHN'S GETS TROPHY.

St. John's Athletic Club have landed the Jubilee trophy cup. The deciding matches were played in the Jubilee Rink last night before the largest crowd that has attended the City League games this season. The first teams to line-up on the ice were the St. John's and Orioles, and the second the Hortons and Aberdeens. In the first game the Orioles were shut out by a score of 4 to 0, while the Hortons defeated the Orioles 3 to 2.

The St. John's have lost one game and won four, and are now in the lead, but one defeat against them until last night's game. Had the Aberdeens secured a victory, it would have been necessary between them and St. John's.

The first game, although keenly contested, was too one-sided to be interesting; but in the last one the excitement was great. The Hortons were the first to score, closely followed by a tally for the Aberdeens. Before half-time was called the Hortons had added another goal to their credit, and managed to maintain their lead until the end of the game. In the second half the play was fast and exciting, and several times the Hortons' goal was in danger, but their excellent defense was too serious to be broken down. The Hortons' combination work of the Horton forwards excelled that of their opponents, and was mainly instrumental in securing the victory. The lineup:
