"MOTHER ROSS" IS GUEST IN CITY

Picturesque Head of White Light Mission Tells Story of Her Work.

AMONG PRISONERS

"Mother Ross," the dear friend of thousands of men and women who pass yearly through the prison gates at Buffalo, has come to London to make a brief visit. Founder of the White Light Mission, whose work she has carried on for the last 23 years, Mrs. John Ross is known throughout the continent as "the woman who knows how to smile." woman who knows now to share where hair is a silvery white and forms a halo about a face which radiates cheeriness and motherliness. She is a guest with Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Freeland, Dufferin avenue, we would be many to be shown to be she is receiving her many friends.

"I was here last year," says Mother Ross, "and this time London seems like home. I know so many people. Last night she added another hundred or so to her list of London friends, when she addressed the prayer meeting of the Adelaide street Baptist church, telling about her work.

Visited Early Courts.

Mother Ross' duties begin early in the morning with the opening of the city court, when she meets the prisoners held overnight and prays with them. For fifteen years she arose in time to attend the early court, which opened at half-past six

After prohibition came into force it was not necessary to open court until 10 o'clock. And of the prohibition act Mother Ross cannot speak too highly.

"The eighteenth amendment is the greatest act ever known," she declares of the prohibition measure. "There would be no arrests at all if the could obtain law enforcement." In her own words, Mother Ross' work is "spreading the gospel and bringing souls into contact with Jesus," and to do this she works at the prison gates. She has been connected with mission work in Buffalo for the past 58 years and in rescue work among 26 years and in rescue work among 27 years.

The White Light Mission, which stands as a memorial to her, was founded just 23 years ago, and was a sort of auxiliary to the anti-saloon league organized at that time. Each day she prays with the prisoners who have come in overnight, she wno nave come in overnight, she gives a practical helping hand where it is needed and throws the doors of her mission wide open each night to provide sanctuary. She visits those in prison and is ready to assist those Volunteer helpers assist in this blendid work, and each year lousands are cared for, given food.
