IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

Close of the Foreign Policy Debate.

HARTINGTON'S MOTION DEFEATED BY 143 MAJORITY.

Plunkett's Confidence Resolution Carried Without a Division.

By Cable Telegraph to the Free Press.

London, Aug. 2.—In the Commons this afternoon the debate on Hartington's resolution was resumed.

Sir Stafford Northcote, replying to Mr. Fawcett, said he could not promise that the reforms proposed in Asiatic Turkey, and the guarantees for their execution, which are yet to be agreed upon, would be submitted to Parliament previously for its sanction.

Mr. Fawcett then gave notice that he would introduce a resolution declaring such prior submission to the House of Commons necessary.

London, Aug. 2.—In the House of Commons this evening the debate on Lord Hartington's resolution was resumed.

Lord Elcho, Conservative member for Haddingtonshire, violently attacked the Opposition, attributing the Russo-Turkish war to their conduct.

W. E. Forster, Liberal member for Bradford, followed. He attributed the war to the Government isolating itself from the other Powers. Like all the other Opposition speakers, he based his principle of attack on the Anglo-Turkish convention, which he declared was unconstitutional in the manner of its conclusion.

Mr. O'Donnell, the Home Rule member for Dungarvon, supported the Government in declaring the Opposition had not a rag of foreign policy.

The debate was continued at great length by a number of minor members, who repeated a stock of arguments strictly in accordance with their known politics. At one time as many as thirty Opposition members rose simultaneously.

Roebuck, the member for Sheffield, said the conduct of the Liberals throughout the crisis had been such that he did not think either himself or Gladstone would live to see them in power again.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Liberal member for Oxford, declared he thought the Government was insincere; that it had no belief whatever that any danger was to be apprehended from Russia in Asia-minor, but that it wanted a pretext for acquiring Cyprus.

Dr. Isaac Butt, Liberal and Home Rule member for Limerick, announced that he would support the Government.

Sir Wilfred Lawson, Radical member for Carlisle, expressed surprise that Plunkett's vote of confidence was not more strongly worded, so as to obtain a definite decision before the dissolution of Parliament, which was imminent.

Sir Stafford Northcote declared that in regard to the prerogative of the crown, the Government had acted strictly in accordance with precedent. He pointed out that it was unfair for Hartington to compare the Treaty of Berlin with that of 1856, as the keystone of the treaty of 1856, namely, The independence and integrity of Turkey, had been destroyed by the Treaty of San Stefano. The Government had succeeded in restoring much of Turkey's independence and integrity, though after the result of the war it was impossible to insist upon their maintenance to the extent fixed by the treaty of 1856. He entered into a detailed refutation of Gladstone's statements in regard to the attitude of the British Plenipotentiaries at the Congress. The Government had used influence to prevent Turkey from attacking Greece, when she could have done so with overwhelming power. In regard to the Anglo-Turkish Convention, he said it was necessary to prevent Russia from undermining British influence in the East, and secrecy was necessary for speedy negotiations. The principal point of his speech was an emphatic denial of the existence of any other secret convention, although he admitted it was quite true there had been confidential communications. In conclusion, he maintained that it was the duty and interest of England to maintain Turkey in as strong a position as practicable.

Hartington briefly replied, closing the debate.

The vote was then taken.

Martington's resolution was rejected by a vote of 338 to 195, and Plunkett's amendment adopted without a division.

The announcement of the vote on Hartington's resolution was received with prolonged cheering.

The Trip of the Dory Nautilus,

Hardships of the Novel Voyage.

London, Aug. 2.—The Nautilus arrived yesterday in Mounts Bay, on the coast of Cornwall. The two brothers from Boston, who brought the craft across the Atlantic, were greatly fatigued. After leaving America they experienced pleasant weather for a few days, but fogs, wind and rain prevailed for a considerable time. Their bed clothes got wet, and for four weeks they slept in wet clothes. For many days they could not step at all and hardly spare time to eat and drink. They passed in dangerous proximity to many shoals of whales.

Swimming Feat on the Thames.

Captain Webb Begun His 36 Hours' Swim.

He Gives up the Task after Nine Hours.

London, Aug. 3.—Capt. Webb has commenced swimming 36 hours continuously without rest in the Thames. He dived off the Parade at Woolwich at six this morning and is swimming towards Gravesend, on reaching which he will turn with the tide and swim back to Woolwich, expecting to reach there at 6 in the evening, when he will again turn with the tide and repeat the trip.

Woolwich, Aug. 3.—Capt. Webb relinquished his attempt to swim from Gravesend in consequence of the high wind. He left the water at sixteen minutes past 7 o'clock, having swam nine hours, and completed 32 miles.

The Shah of Persia announces that his eldest son will make a tour in Europe next year.

EUROPEAN AFFAIRS.
