

INCIPIENT PARALYSIS.

The Peculiar Experience of a Publico Lady.

Attacked with Diphtheria, the After Effects of Which were Developing into Paralysis—Hope Almost Abandoned when Recovered.

From "The Light," Vermont, N. S. There was many a disease looked upon as dangerous to life from which the victim apparently recovered, but which in reality had left behind effects that make life miserable.

Such a sufferer was Mrs. Eliza Goodwin, of Painesville, N. S. She was first attacked with diphtheria, and when the violence of that trouble had ended it was found that it had left behind the seeds of disease which not only made her life miserable but threatened her with permanent invalidism.

Joker's Corner.

His Petal Reef. THE TALK OF A WORTHLESS CHECK.

It was a bad debt or it never would have happened. "I'm in a dreadful hurry or I would go down to the bank with you," reiterated Bolton, passing over his signed check.

"It wouldn't take you more than fifteen minutes," he suggested; "then I wouldn't have to be identical with you."

"But I must catch the 3 o'clock train out of the city," said the word Bolton began to straighten his head.

"Anyhow," thought Hasleton, "a piece of paper is better than nothing. Only the cashier may think I'm a nifty. Take Bolton's check for $100."

But Hasleton went at once to the bank, taking with him a business acquaintance who had a deposit there.

The paying teller looked the check over and then said to the depositor, "Hasleton, this is a check for $100."

"We shall have to refuse payment on this," said the teller, again appearing at the window.

"No funds," queried Hasleton. "Insufficient funds," returned the teller. It was a delicate situation on the part of the teller, but Hasleton felt so dejected.

"How much?" "This was some quibbling, but finally the teller admitted that there was $121 to the credit of Bolton.

"Well, here," blurted Hasleton, "I'll take the $121 and call it square."

"The teller said him that he couldn't do it; that he must pay out the full $100 or nothing."

Hasleton picked up the check and turned away from the window. "Do you know," he said to his friend, "I believe that Bolton worked that scheme purposely, knowing that I wouldn't protest the check, and knowing also that the teller wouldn't pay it."

"His friend thought as much too. "And to think that the whole case was $121 and that $21 right in there where I can't touch it!"

He was kicking into the middle of the floor, when all at once he straightened up. "By George! I've got it!"

"What?" and Hasleton's eyes opened. "But Hasleton had already turned to the writing table and was filling out a deposit slip."

"Here, here," exclaimed another moment, turning about with a slip of pink paper. It read: "Credit to the account of Henry Z. Bolton $121," and below was the signature of Hasleton.

With this slip and a handful of change Hasleton passed to the receiving teller's window and took a receipt for $121 deposited to the credit of Henry Z. Bolton. Then he walked to the paying teller's window, presenting the check again, together with the receipt.

"Bolton's funds are sufficient now, I believe," he suggested. "The teller looked at the receipt, smiled, questioned the receiving teller through the wire partition, turned and paid to Hasleton two $20 bills and five tens."

"By holley!" was all that his friend could say. "As for Hasleton, he was too full for utterance of any kind. Bolton is still out of town."

"But I shouldn't be surprised if he drops dead in that bank the next time he pines for a check there."

"And from that you Hasleton chuckles it is more to me that he wouldn't be a humorist at Bolton's expense."

No Mail for the Wattses. A lantern jawed young man called at the Montezuma Record post office and asked: "Is anything for the Wattses?"

"Nothing," replied the postmaster. "Anything for Jane Wattses?" "No."

"Anything for Ace Wattses?" "No."

"Anything for Bill Wattses?" "Nothing."

"Anything for Joe Wattses?" "No, nor Jim Wattses nor any other Wattses, dead or living, unless, native or foreign, civilized or uncivilized, savage or barbaque, male or female, white or black, fringed or unfringed, castrated or otherwise, but there is positively nothing for any of the Wattses, either individually, severally, jointly, now and forever, one inseparable."

"What did the mail do to him?" "I dunno, sah. He was only one day out of town, but he never did come back."

He meant to be right. Jack and Tom, who were first sent to school, were asked what were their names. Tom, who was first, replied: "Tom, sir."

"You must not say that, my boy! you should say 'Thomas.'"

Jack determined that he would not fall into that mistake, and when he was asked, "Jack, please?" he replied: "Jack, please."

A Saracenic Pastime. Father (upstairs)—"What time is it down there?" "It is twelve, father."

Mamma (down in the parlor)—"Just 10 by the clock, papa."

Father—"All right. Don't forget to start the clock again when the young man gets home."

"We're going to have an entirely new kind of clock in use this year," said Tom to his mother. "It's all to be pendulum after the latest of the scientific clock-makers. It's called the 'Electric' clock, and it's the most accurate of all."
