

she never gave her pictures to young men, under any circumstances. When she found a young man with whom she could trust her photo, she said she would give him the original. Harry said something very softly then ; I did not hear what it was, but she said very plainly, very seriously, that she would let him know before she left.

“And you go to-morrow ?” he asked,