

Apart from the actual preservation of the peace, and, indeed, related to it, there is no more important objective for Western policy than this, and every possible effort must now be devoted, with understanding, with goodwill, and with energy to its achievement.

S/C