

FABLE XI.

THE DIRTY FOSTER PARENTS.

A Goose and a Duck each sat upon a batch of Hen's eggs, and in due time brought forth Broods of Chickens. The young Birds appeared to have a Strong Affection for their Foster Parents, and all went well until the latter, True to their Natural Inclination,