ATTACK ON CENSOR

Everything Connected With Conduct of War Complained of Bitterly.

"doctored in an optimistic " and also denounced the gov-sense." and also denounced the government or not going sooner to the assistance of Serbia.

Baron Courtney of Penwith, well-known as a peace advocate, followed Vascount Milner. He said the government should show itself ready to accept any suggestions which would end the war, concluding; however, that the Germans must agree to evacuate Belgium and France and that no indemnity should be demanded on Great Britain.

Earl Curzon's Defence.

Barl Curzon of Kedleston, lord grivy seal, who replied for the government, defended the colition cabinet and its Liberal predecessor. He remainded the critics of the gov-government, defended the colition cabinet and its Liberal predecessor. He reminded the critics of the gov-military authorities of the entents allies, whether they were satisfied with the supplies of men and money, and if the communications had been properly safeguarded. He asked these questions, safeguarded. He asked these questions, he said, because there was an uneasy feeling that there had not been sufficient expert supervision. The government, he declared, should reselve not to hold out expectations to a nation which was confronted with extreme peril, unless they were sure they would be able to make good with which was confronted with extreme peril. unless they were sure they would be able to make good with a timely and sufficient force.

15.000.000 Casualties.

In saying that he had been informed that 15.000,000 men already had been killed or disabled in the war. Earl Loreburn added that this was what was meant by a war of attrition, and that while the war continued the government should do their best to prevent irreparable mistakes. No scheme should be attempted, he said, without the approval of the highest naval and military authorities. The idea of a small cabinet reporting to a full cabinet on such matters, Earl Loreburn characterized as highly unsatisfactory.

The Marquis of Lansdowne announced that a small committee of the cabinet, which some papers say will consist of Premier Asquith, Arthur J. Balfour (first of or of the admiralty) and David Lloyd George (minister of munitions), had been arranged, and that its personnel would be made known almost immediately. The downe continued, had proceeded on the tawer of its decisions only in cases where there were entirely new departures or a great change in policy had been resorted to, when the concurrence of the whole cabinet would be required.

Defends Balkan Policy.

Defending the government's Balkan policy the Marquis of Lansdowne announced that a small committee of the cabinet, which scree papers say will consist of Premier Asquith, Arthur J. Balfour (first of Committee of munitions), had been arranged, and that its personnel would be made known almost immediately.

The government, the Marquis of Lansdowne continued that a small committee of the cabinet, which scree papers say will consist of Premier Asquith, Arthur J. Balfour (first of Committee of munitions), had been arranged, and that its personnel to the make the radius that its personnel to the marting of the marting of the same arranged, and that its personnel to the marting of the same arranged, and that its personnel to the marting of the marting of the marting of the same arranged, and that its personn try from first to last has been most seriously misleading. It has been doctored in an optimistic sense."

He complained that not only was news suppressed, but of the news published he had been told by officers who had returned from the front that, on the whole the German reports of the operations had been more trustworthy.

Would Discuss Settlement.

Baron Courtney of Penwith, after referring to the fact that no move has been made on the western front or in the Dardanelles for some time past and declaring that the situation at sea was unchanged, asked if "there is no alternative to this unparalleled and unceasing strife." He said he was sure there was, altho he would not ask the government now to define it. He thought "we should show curselves ready to accept any suggestion which might be offered for ending it."

After pointing out that the liberation of Belgium and northern France and that no indemnity should be levied on Great Britain were three things vital to the possibility of a settlement of the war. Baron Courtney of Penwith said he thought the freedom of the seas would probably be discussed when peace was being established and not afterwards.

Not Shietiding Reputations.

Barl Curzon of Kedleston declared that all the matters of which Earl Loreburn had complained with regard to the suppression of news occurred before the formation of the coalition cabinet, but having read the papers connected with the incident he would say that if any one thought the object of concealment was to spare the political reputation of any man that was a most unjust impression. The more one looked on the papers, the more clearly did it transpire that individual political reputations had been most unitarity assailed, and that those who were most directly attacked had nothing to far.

Earl Loreburn, continued Earl Curzon of Kedleston, appeared to think experts

Bari Loreburn, continued Earl Curzon of Redieston, appeared to think experts always spoke with one voice. That had not been his experience in the last few months. As to the contention that political considerations should not enter into the war it was impossible to argue the opinions of England's allies. Very likely their urgent appeals were not to be weighed in the balance and matters ought to be looked at solely from the point of view of generals and admirals.

Danger in Frankness.

Earl Curzon said he agreed generally with the principles laid down by Viscount Milner with regard to the publication of news, but he thought it would be unwise to be unduly trank about diplomatic and political situations which might assume new forms from day to day. The government, he added, was unanimous in a desire to give the public as much information as possible.

After having oraised the press as a Globe Merited Penalty. He reminded the critics of the government that experts did not always agree. He announced that the government was considering whether arrangements could not be made for creating closer contact between the press and the fighting forces.

Earl Loreburn, in addition to his other utterances, asked whether the landing at Salomki had been made with the approval of the naval and military authorities of the entente allies, whether they were satisfied with the supplies of men and money, and if the communications had been propagly pealing for help, and we were doing our best to help her."

After being warned, Earl Curzon said, The Globe repeated its act, and as a re-sult the government authorized its sus-pension under the Defence of the Realm jealousies and animosities, however, had prevented this.

When the history of these transactions came to be written, the Marquis of Lansdowne continued, it would be found that "no foreign minister had ever hay a more thankless and perhaps, I might add, hopeless task entruste dto him."

downe continued, it would be found that downe continued, it would be found that sallors had murdered the crew of a German submarine, as a case in point.

Niner's Criticisms.

Viscount Milner, who recently suggested the withdrawal of our troops from Gallipoli, and denounced the British policy of secrecy," declared that the news published in Esgland was misleading from first to last, and had been constantly "doctored." The German reports, a easerted, were more trustworthy than a British.

He insisted that if the government had depreparations to meet the continuely, which for months had appeared a elihood, Serbia would have been given fficient assistance six weeks ago to able her to resist the combined attack the central powers and Bulgaria, hen the Greek crisis came, it would be found that "no foreign minister had ever hay a more thankless and perhaps, I might add, hepeless task entruste do him."

Forced to Wait.

When the relations of Bulgaria and Serbia first became strained, the minister went on, it was thought intervention ingly precipitate trouble, which the government wished to avoid. Besides it was mossible to find troops them, as the big offensive in the was mot due to the fact that they had any doubt whether they ought to take part in opposing the forward movement of Germany across Serbia to Bulgaria, but because at that moment it was impossible to say what would be the most effectual way of coming to the assistance of the allies, including Serbia. False steps at that moment would have been possible, had the government ted with the greatest alacrity and de-

The Eglinton Town Hall perhaps never before held such a wildly enthusiastic gathering as that of last night, when Corp. It was a notable event in the northern part of the city and the town hall was thronged, so that hundreds were unable to gain admittance.

that he had gone carefully over the Oakwood avenue road and finds that the best material was used in construction, and that it was laid according to specifica-tions by the contractor engaged on the

The question of Hydro lights for Oakwood was discussed at considerable length. J. Wallbank complained that the York Township Council was not using the district right in the matter of street and house lighting.

"We have communicated with the York and house lighting.

"We have communicated with the York Township Council as far back as last August, and have not had any acknowledgment of our letter," he said. He proposed that the matter be left over until next October, when the York Township Council will be compelled to act.

W. Jarvis took exception to the remarks of Mr. Wallbank, and moved that the discussion be laid over for a full meeting of the association.

meeting of the association.

Lay Question Over.

It was resolved, "that the matter of the lighting of the Oakwood district by the hydro-electric be laid over for six nonths."

The water question was next discussed. Draw From Humber.

Charles Bansley suggested that a sufficient supply of water could be secured from the Humber, which the township could filter, or, as an alternative, there was enough water in the Black Creek to supply Fairbank for the next twenty-five years and the cost would not be more years, and the cost would not be more years, and the cost would not be incretain five cents a thousand gallons.

The following members were elected to act on the executive committee: W. J. McMallen and J. Dickenson.

The chairman announced that a sum of $562.05 was collected in the Oakwood district for the British Red Cross, the largest amount collected in any district Township Council to Grant Request of Many Petitioners Asking Change.

MADE ARRANGEMENT

Deputation From Birch Cliff Takes Up Question of Water Supply.

The Scarboro Township Council held its regular monthly meeting yester-day a large number of routine and other matters coming up for settle-ment. There was a large deputation present from the Birch Cliff district, elative to the water question, and an amiable arrangement was arrived at Dr. Price made application for the purchase of 10 feet of land adjoining his property at Lakeview avenue, leading down to the lake, claiming that with the grading of Lakeview, the need of the 10-foot strip giving access to the lake was obviated. Reeve Cornell took strong ground against grant-ing the petition, in view of the future possibility of the waterfront, and the matter stands in abeyance. George Green was reappointed col-lector of taxes at the same rate as was decided in accordance with a signed petition to change the date of polling to New Year's Day, and a by-law to this effect has been prepared.

Mimico and New Toronto May Abandon the Idea of Uniting Their Interests.

The proposed amalgamation of the wir. Villages of Mimico and New Toronto into one municipality, advocated by enthusiasts from each of the villages and practically considered as closed, may not be carried out, a good deal of opposition having lately developed. The Mimico Town Council met last night and at this meeting it was stated that unless some active steps were taken to bring about the union the whole scheme might be abandoned. The two municipalties are now engaged in a joint sewerage scheme, and this will be carried to a finish irrespective of the amalgama-
