But, nevertheless, modern business needs above all things a code of reneeds above all things a code of remen in their business relations to each other, as buyers and sellers, as producers and consumers, as employers and wage-carners. By this is not meant a code of principles based on meant as code of principles based on one based upon the law of right in its higher interpretations, As business becomes more and more powerness becomes more and more powerits higher interpretations. As business becomes more and more powerful, in fact the controlling factor in diffe, there needs to be, directing and diffe, there needs to be, directing and of justice and truth. The different is commercial if an impatience and disregard of law when it interferes with the progress of the great transaction immediately in hand. There is a tendency to sacrifice all else to success. In no other way may a knowledge and appreciation of true principles be better obtained than by early instruction in an educational institution conducted on safe and sound lines. Nor will time be lost that is devoted in such training even though one is to devote his life to the commercial career.
