Coroner Alguire: "Now Nettie, don't look or nod your counsel. You understand evidence you give here cannot be used against you at your trial. Do you want to give evidence?" She replied: "I don't want to give evidence."

Mr. Stiles: "That's right, my girl." The examination of Flossie and Leila St. Pierre, age 9 and 10 years, was pathetic. The children, pretty as pic-tures, despite their shabby clothing answered almost every question read-ply. They had never heard of God, they told the coroner, and were never inside a church. They live in a prosperous and well-churched county, but, according to the children, no church people ever came to see them .William . Pierre was refused burial in the regular cemetery, and ministers re-fused to perform the marriage cerenony over young St. Pierre and Nettie Richmire.

Alleged Crimes Untrue. Inspector Miller says there is no truth in the story that St. Pierre killed 20 of 27 children. This statement was made by Mrs. St. Pierre, who also accused her husband of committing offence against his little girls. Two statements of Miss Richmire were introduced, one confessing that she had shot St. Pierre in his home after he assaulted her, and another confessing to implication in the shooting, but lacing the real crime on Emerson St. The first was signed by her in the presence of R Haynes and In-spector Miller. The second one was not read because of her counsel's strenuous objections that it was made whi she was in Cornwall jail and in great terfor. "No judge in the country would admit that statement," said Mr. Stiles. "I will fight it here and fight
