

POKING A LITTLE FUN AT THE U. S. GOVERNMENT

(New York Evening Post)
Steadily there is being worked out, as between the friends of an American policy of world co-operation and understanding and the supporters of an American policy of isolation and irritation, a modus vivendi to which advocates of the broader vision can cheerfully subscribe. The terms of the arrangement are very simple.

(1) It is understood that the flags of the Allies shall not be carried in Memorial Day parades. But it is also understood that America's representatives shall sit on the Supreme Council of the Allies, on the Council of Ambassadors, and on the Reparations Commission.

(2) It is understood that Col. Harvey shall be allowed, if he really must, to declare that we went to war solely for the sake of our own skins and because we were virtually kicked into the war.

But it is also understood that President Harding shall wipe Col. Harvey gently but firmly off the map with the reminder that we went to war, among other primary reasons, because democracy was challenged and civilization was menaced.

(3) It is to be permitted, for those who are so inclined, to assert that our unity of interests with the Allies ended with the Armistice, and that for us the period since then is a blank page to be filled in according to our own pleasure. But Germany, in making her reparations payments to the Allies, may do so by depositing money with our Federal Reserve System to the credit of France and Great Britain.

(4) It is understood that Senator Poindexter and his associates are at liberty to clamor for a navy greater than Great Britain's and to contemplate with satisfaction the possibility of a conflict with Great Britain. But it is also understood that President Harding is to call Great Britain and Japan into conference for a discussion of the reduction of competitive armaments.

(5) It is understood that the economic rehabilitation of the United States is to be promoted by emergency tariffs that look handsome on paper. But it is also understood that economic revival in the United States is dependent upon world revival and that American producers must be willing to buy as well as to sell.

In general, it is understood that parsimony or racial spite or just ordinary parochial vision are not to be deprived of the little outbursts of temper which are essential to their happiness. But it is also understood that the facts which work for an enlightened American policy of world co-operation will inexorably shape the activities of the United States.

CANADA BEST OFF.

Ottawa Journal—Canada is comparatively fortunate in the matter of unemployment. In a statement coming from some official source which was recently published, Denmark was given as the country "with the highest percentage" of civilized countries in the matter of employment, and Canada placed second. Some newspapers took this to mean that Denmark was worst off, and Canada next worse. The reverse was meant. Denmark and Canada were named as the best off.

When Gov. Lake of Connecticut appointed Alonso W. Burns harbor master in Milford, Conn., the citizens petitioned for another appointment. Burns could not discharge the duties of the office because he had been dead for more than a year. Learning of his error, the governor has just appointed Daniel B. Perry, and, as he is alive, no further trouble is anticipated.
