

The Farmer's Corner.

Our cellar is rather damp. Our severe climate makes it generally necessary and always prudent to cut grafts of cherry, plums and other fruits in December, before severely cold, dry weather comes to injure their structure. If we bed them in moss, sawdust, or the like, and place them on the floor of the cellar they receive too much moisture and injury by it. If we put them within the draft of air which sweeps the cellar whenever the windows can be opened, for we air it much as possible, they lose their natural moisture and suffer by drying. If we fasten the top of the bottom of a box against the wall on the floor, the confined air favors the growth of mould, which also injures them. We have lately used sifted coal ashes with excellent success, making it just slightly damp, not wet at all, filling every interstice with it, covering the box close, and sitting it on some bricks to elevate it from the wet floor. Its purification by fire, its retention of the contained moisture and its fine yet open composition, are the qualities which render coal ashes so peculiarly adapted for storing. Then it is always at hand if there. They are to be had covered but containing a mounted riddle for sifting all stove debris. The sifting kept dry, can be copiously used in closets with manifold advantage.—Fruit Recorder.

A Lady Farming.

Mrs. Swain, of Kansas is a plucky woman who has a farm of 360 acres of prairie land. This spring she resided ten acres of what of her own plowing and sowing and put down 20 acres more, besides some sorghum and broom corn. She is not a strong-bodied woman; on the contrary, when she began her plowing she was so feeble that she had an easy chair at the end of her furrow, and was obliged to get up every second row to stop and rest. She chose this life because she had more fitness for it than for any other thing she saw promise of a future for two little sons whom she desired to educate to usefulness. Her health improves, and a sheep-raiser in the neighborhood has engaged her to plough ten acres of land for him and take her pay in sheep.

WORKING OXEN.—Says an exchange.—Of course we can drive the oxen home, we told the farmer. The idea of doubling our ability when we have seen them handled every day for the past month! He handed over the long whip and started them, we taking the proper position just in front of them. We were enough, though rather monotonous, till we met a team coming the other way; then we "geed" those oxen into a ditch, and running against a tree, came to a standstill. We received a pleasant smile from the teamster, as we had given him the whole road. But there were—

We hallooed "gee," "haw" and "back," and swore till the oxen felt rough. We couldn't get ahead unless we borrowed an axe and cut the tree down, and when we tried to back them they spread out from the pole and stood face to face, nearly choking themselves. Then our patience gave out; we kicked the near one in the ribs; he playfully retorted by switching us across the face with his fly disperser. We lit a pipe and puffed smoke into their nostrils. This was a happy thought; they sneezed over us and backed, but forgot to stop till they got a stone wall between them. We went home to borrow a steam derrick, but before the arrangements were made the oxen came in view, and calmly stopped in front of the barn. You may think there is nothing human in an ox, but we are ready to say that both winked, when they saw us, and one had a positive grin on his face. We refrain from expressing our opinion of oxen.

USUEL REMEDY.—For the Gums.—Aqua water will harden the gums and prevent loosening of the teeth. Remedy for Corns.—A slice of lemon bound on, or bread soaked in vinegar. To Remove Spots from Silk.—Benzine, ethanol or soap will take out spots from silk, but remember the goods must not be rubbed. To Restore Colors.—Sal-volatile, or hartshorn, will restore colors taken out by acid.

To Cut White.—Hold it in the flame of the lamp for an instant, and you can cut it with shears. To Keep Mice Away.—Camphor placed in drawers or trunks will prevent the mice from doing them an injury. Ink stains in cotton or linen can be removed by washing in salt and water. This should be done before the fabric is washed with soap.

COW STABLE.—For common use, a good plank cow stable floor with manure gutter, and a slight descent towards the gutter, seems to answer the best. We have found that plank for such floors lasts much longer, and the floors are more easily kept clean, if thoroughly soaked with crude petroleum, and they would probably be still more durable if first soaked in this way and afterwards coated with gas tar. The same treatment given to the sleepers would render them durable. If coal tar contains much water, the cement formed from it would not harden well, and it is also important to have good sand and gravel—if it contains much clay and refuse matter it would be defective.—Country Gentleman.

BLACK FINISH FOR BRASS.—Optical and philosophical instruments made in France often have on their brass parts a face of a fine dead black color, very permanent and difficult to imitate. The following, obtained from a foreign source, is the process used by the French artisans: Make a strong solution of nitrate of silver in one dish and of nitrate of copper in another. Mix the two together and plunge the brass into it. Remove the heat brass evenly until the required degree of dead blackness is obtained.
