Hanlan es. Courtney. TORONTO, ONT., April 26. During the six months that have elapsed since the disgraceful fiasco at Chantauqua Lake, public opinion has been completely revolutionized in this city. After the 16th of October people were so thoroughly disgusted with what they termed the cowardy conduct of the American, that they iversally expressed the hope that Hanlan would never consent to race again with Courtney, much less go away from home. sidered that Hanlan had fairly won the championship of the continent, and they thought that he should insist on holding it, as he had a perfect right to do, till it was wrested from him on Toronto Bay. To day his friends and admirers, or, in one word, the population of this city, while expressing their disappointment at missing such an exhibition of aquatic is any one man that can beat Ned, COURTNEY IS THAT MAN." "What do you think of the course?" While recognizing his powers, the public have never admitted that it was at all probable that the championship was likely to leave Canada for at least a few seasons more. When the Herald arrived here on Tuesday last, and the account of Courtney's new rig was made public, there was much amusement created. The local papers printed the accounts in extras, which were eagerly sought after. Twentyfour hours after everyone was laughing, and ridiculing the idea. The general from home to row an American?" belief is that the story was started to influence betting. When Hanlan leaves here to-night for Washington, he will carry with him the entire confidence of ment, and expect to at Washington. I all the people in the Dominion, who beall the people in the Dominion, who believe be will return after the strucgle on the 17th with additional honor. I hope they leave here with large sums to back him with, should Courtney row. As to The N. B. Legislature Acts of 1879. this, there is much doubt expressed. Those men whose experience gives weight Legislature, Lieut. Governor Wilmot as-belief is that Courtney will not row. The majority certainly hope that he will, and that the race will be a fair and THOROUGH TEST OF THE ABILITIES OF THE RESPECTIVE MEN.

Being aware that Hanlan intended to leave for Washington to-night, I called on him at his quarters over on the island. This island is a narrow strip of unproductive land, lying about two miles out in the lake from the city. It was formerly an arm of the mainland, but the washing of the lake broke through a low portion of it, and now helps to form Toronto bay, the place where all our regattas are held. Upon reaching Hanlan's Point, I directed my steps to his homestead to have a parting chat. I found him busily engaged in superintending the building of his new hotel, and, while he was giving some instructions to his men, I had an opportunity to take a good look at his condition. A glance was sufficient to convince me he was enjoying the lest of health. The superfluous flesh, which last winter was complained of, and made so much of weeks ago I weighed 174 pounds, and now weigh 163 pounds with this heavy clothing. With racing clothes I shall weigh about 156 pounds. At the Centennial my flesh was softer than it was last winter. There was really surprise at that contest; not so much at myself, as because the other fellows did not row faster. Why, I

"Talking about working, Ned, how much do you practise?"

"Well, I don't row a race every day, but I do not need any urging to get into trim. I am too anxious to win that race, and that is worse, than to let want of practice ruin my chances of crossing the first line? the one that I used when I beat Hawdon and Elliot in England, and one that I am now practising with. I shall not use her Washington, because she is for a It was because she is so hard to turn that I very nearly got beaten at Barric. There is my Elliot boat on the shelf. That is the one I rowed in at Lachine. She is a little too limber now, so I shall not use her. The boat that I expect to use at Washington is a new one that Warin Bros. over in the city are building. It will be 30 feet 6 inches long and 11 wide—six inches shorter than my practice boat. It weighs only 27 pounds, five pounds less than my Elliot, and I think it is the lightest rowed shell ever made. It is made of white ceder instead of Spanish cedar, and has an ornamental wash box of curled Hungarian ash. Here are my sculls, also made by Warin, out of spruce; splendid ones they are, quite stiff, and made just to suit me." "By the by, what do you think of Courtney's rig?" "I saw an article in your papers about a new rig Courtney is said to have invented, with which he will be able to beat me e-quarters of a mile. I don't know what it may be, or how he may fix it. He may put himself in his boat, and I will make him go so fast that he will

FORGET ALL ABOUT HIS NEW RIG. I feel confident of making faster time than ever I did before, if the course and water are what they should be. "When do you go to Washington?"

"I leave to-night, because I want to be first man on the grounds and have first choice of places. It is a great thing to be in good comfortable quarters, and, if I skill, are as ready as ever to back up their arrived there after the other men. I might man-anxious Courtney should be met have to put up in quarters that I would not like. Heavy, who was at Lachine again. Courtney's abilities as a sculler are by no means unrecognized here in Hanlan's with me and a young fellow named Twinstronghold. Frequently can be heard ing, aregoing with me. As to the crowd, I have no doubt that there will be a larger and more fashionable crowd to witness the race than any I ever rowed before. That will be another res why I shall want to win." "Are you not afraid to go so far away me he was enjoying the lest of health. The superfluous flesh, which last winter was complained of, and made so much of in the New York papers, as every one thought here to influence betting, had gone, Outwardly, his appearance at once gave confidence of good racing condition. The impression was correct, because, in answer to a question, he said: "How do I feel? Well, I never felt better in my life. In training this spring I have made use of past experience, and have not decreased my weight by the old-fashioned process, which used to exhaust me. Four weeks ago I weighed 174 pounds, and now pends very much on the weather and the state of the water, but I go out regularly overy day. If the wind is blowing off shore, the water is too rough for a shell on this side. To get around that I keep a boat over at the city, When necessary, I pull over in a skiff and take a turn.

I pull over in a skiff and take a turn. Then, when the wind is blowing toward the city our bay is smooth, and I pull here. So you see that it matters but little how rough the water may be out on the lay. Between the two places I can always find a comparatively smooth course."

"Well, if you have been working like that for a month, let's see your hands; they must be marked a little."

"Look there! Don't that hard lump, and that, and that, show I have been working? Why two or three weeks ago the ineide of both hands were pretty sore and tender, but now you see for yourself that they are as hard and as well as they can be."
