

DEATH STARED LATHAM IN FACE AS HE WAILED IN WOODS FOR 24 HOURS

North End Man Despaired of Life When He Was Lost in Dense Forest Near Hamstead Giving Up All Hope When Night Came—Squeezed Water From Mud to Quench Thirst.

Tuesday, June 24. For a day and a night in dense woods, almost fainting with hunger and forced to squeeze water from the mud of the swamps to quench his burning thirst, Frederick Latham, of 90 Portland street, found himself in a dangerous predicament at 1 o'clock just at the moment of despair when he walked from the forest into the village of Hamstead, just seventeen miles from where he was first lost.

Straying away from his three companions while fishing at Fish Lake, about four miles from Oak Point, Mr. Latham found himself in a strange country. The woods in the district are the densest in the province, and few people, even those familiar with the place, could enter them without compass to direct them. It was early on Sunday morning that he missed his companions. Standing on the border of the lake day, he became convinced that the very shore he could not see them and shouted as loud as he could but received no reply.
