Suspected Murder of a Ship's Crew, A negro has lately been arrested in New York, on suspicion of having murdered the crew of a vessel in which he was cook. The vessel which was lying off City Island, below new York, was observed to sink suddenly. Seeing the negro leave her in a cance, suspicion was excited of some foul play ou his part, i consequence of which he was arrested.

MAKING HAMS.

As this is about the period of the year when most families lay down their meat and been subdued. It appears that about 6 PORK HAMS-When the meat is ite o'clock in the evening the fire brok out perfectly cold, after being killed, it is in the hat shop, from which it soon ready to be salted. The salt should be spread to the machine shop, carpenter's shop and other out buildings of the prison. Considerable excitement prevailed among the prisoners, who had not yet returned to their cells. Both male and female prisoners, were almost frantic; many of and every part carefully rubbed with this them shouted out their wishes for the salt; then they should be laid in a tub class until the next day. The same operation hould be repeated every day for for four Dior attached to the west side of the prison days, taking care to turn the hams in the tub every time they are laid down. After this, the operation may be repeated once Cull every two days for a week, when in will H iscal manner, The loss is estimated at be found that the meat has absorbed Mor

When cold, the hams med may be placed in this pickle and left for ment three weeks. They should then be lifted, Dale bung up for three or four days to drip, and are then fit to se smoked. For family use, instead of smoking the Co. hams after they are salted and dripped, Mon if they are simply rubbed over with black pepper and bung up for a few days to dry, the meat acquires a very fine Hon flavor, a mild smoky taste may be given treat to the hams without smoking them, by simply smoking the parrels in which they are to be laid down in pickle. This is a good plan, because the taste of the smoke which some persons like—is given to the meat without discoloring it. Sid-s of pork should be treated in the same manner as hams laid in the pickle; but Com for home use, during winter, by merely Que rubbing the sides with salt every day for a week of ten days, then hanging them in a moderately cool place to dry for use, Mer the meat is much sweeter than that laid idan, in pickle. This information we have derived from one long engaged in curang pork, and we have satisfied ourselves, of Ca practically of its correctness. The Bay
