Expert's Opinion on the River Opening

Sharp Decline in Several Commodities as Season Becomes More Advanced.

"The market is at a standstill and speculation on perishables is up a tree," said one of the principal deal-charles H. Stockton, late commander ers this morning, from which the of the battleship Kentucky, has ar-Nugget market reporter inferred that rived from China on his way to Lonon the eve of the opening of navigation jobbers and dealers bought in the open market only as they had orders States embassy to fill. Speculation at present appears to be confined as to when the captain says he does not anticipate river will open and the general condition of the ice above and below the goes out in front of the city for uninterrupted navigation does not exist icy fetters which often does not occur until ten days or two weeks later ble with the Boxers. than the opening of the river at this point. Here is the situation as sized up by an importer who has been in has made a study of the conditions years. First of all the most of the scows and ninety great-grandchildren. Last year scows that left Whitehorse on May 2, the earliest possible date, did not arrive in Dawson until the 19th, being 17 days en route and getting into port but twenty-four hours later than the first steamer five days after the opening of the river at Dawson. Taking into consideration the fact that no scows have as yet arrived at the head of the lake from Whitehorse and putting this and that together the ice prophet predicts that the first steamer will not arrive before the 25th and the advance guard of the scow fleet will be from one to two days later.

Assuming that the foregoing date is correct there remains two weeks and Onions are in abundance with prices all shot to pieces. A short time ago they were held at 16 to 18 and today you can buy a crate or a car load for 9 cents.

The stock is considered just about enough to last out with none to There are in sight today approximately 500 cases, 400 of which are held by one of the large comanies. The consumption at present prices is estimated at 40 cases a day the price the same as it was last week 17 to 20, according to quality. There are no large lots in the city, practically all being held by many of the dealers in small quantities. 'Oranges and lemons are in abundance though the retail price is still at a point that prohibits their general use. Apples are becoming scarce and will be totally exhausted by the time the river opens. There is no change in any of the staples.
