WHENAHT'S BEAR HUNT.

Related by. Chief Jesse.

Whenaht a mighty hunter, Nimrod of the Pacific Coast, lived at Kitamaat.
When he obtained chieftainship Humgheat was his name. He was large in stature and of powerful build. He knew no fear on water or land of animal or man.

One fine September day some years ago he took his cedar canoe with two men and went down the Kitamaat Inlet 8 miles, to hunt in the Kildahlah Arm.
After drawing up their canoe beyond the reach of the high tide, he separated himself from his companions and went in search of the largest game-grizzlies.
He did not seek long before he came across a family of six, the male and female monsters with four large five months old cubs, he got a good shot at the he-bear and he rolled over dead without a struggle, whereupon the cubs scampered in all directions frightened at the unusual sound of a gun. But the she-bear enraged charged furiously
