

Your Corner

The world is falling, not much time look closely, adjust your mind missed the exit, didn't see the sign not much difference, see you sometime

Someone calls and it is God throws an arrow, you fling a sod all this, while you're walking your dog in one small machine you're a pretty big cog

Too many miles on some highway day-long heat, not much to say if you're a potter I'm damn poor clay or I don't think I'd defy you this way Parked my car down by the docks forgot the keys in the lock worth two grand and money talks guess from now on I've got to walk

Train ahead is off the tracks car is coming, comes too fast ain't the first wreck won't be the last with mortal blood weighed and cast

The bike is spilled, took the corner tight scattered gravel, not enough light broken femur, but that's alright lucky to escape with your life

Wrinkled paper, spoken words don't hate the guys but I love the girls but nobody's listening in this world to the things I've said, the words I've hurled Buy some pot to help a friend not much money, but some to spend can't see tomorrow, today won't end they're pretty friendly, but the law won't bend

Can't say I know what you have heard I scorned some people, broke my word had a long time but not much learned not much reason, but I endured

I love you but I must go it's not that cold but I think it'll snow I say yes but you answer no you must have frozen me to the bone

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF COLONEL BLIMP
Jan 25

The first of the Technicolor extravaganzas on which the reputation of Powell and Pressburger rests, and ostensibly a wartime propaganda message to the effect that nice guys finish last, the life of General Clive Wynne-Candy is in reality an elegy to a lost Edwardian era when the leisure class could espouse good sportsmanship as the highest virtue, and even opponents in the Great War could respect each other as officers and gentlemen. As a portrait of the "Blimp" mentality, however, the script was close enough to the bone to raise the ire of Winston Churchill who first sought to stop production (an opposition that led to the cutting of some forty minutes before domestic release) and then attempted to block foreign distribution. Starring Roger Livesey, Deborah Kerr, and Anton Walbrook.
