The Russians, because of the important successes, have been enabled to resume the siege of Przemysl with renewed fury.

The Austrian rearguard, according to the dispatch, are fighting desperately with the Russians to cover the retreat of the right wing across the Carpathians. Petrograd despatches dwell to-day particularly on reported differences between the German and Austrian Commanding Officers, which have caused dissensions among the rank and file of both armies to such an extent that the Austrians are said to have refused further co-operation with the Germans.

General Dankl, the Commander-in-Chief of the Austrians is now retreating through Galicia with his forces and is said to have refused to have any further dealings with the Germans.
