EMPTY CHURCHES. - Mr. Bok

the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, a gentleman who is at home on every imaginable subject and write well upon every conceivable theme-whether he knows anything about it or not-has undertaken to tell his readers why it is that the churches are so empty of young men. Of course he means Protestant churches. It is, he says, on account of the lack of attractive preaching. He says that such men as Henry Ward Beecher, Phillip Brooks and Dr. Rainsford never had to complain of the scarcity of young men in their audiences. Of course not. They were eloquent and even sensational P.P. preachers. A Catholic contemporary referring to Mr. Bok's estimate of the attractions needeu in churches has the following very striking comment

"It evidently does not occur to him that he makes the poorest of all cream braid and touches of gold, and arguments for religion in insisting that its drawing power depends upon the magnetism of an individual man, that faith in God shall flourish only in proportion as its preachers have for Toronto, Chicago, St. Louis and the gift of eloquence or the knach of other places in the United States, entertainment. ABBE BOURASSA, P.P.-On Sunday last at all the Masses, and espocially at the Grand Mass, at St Louis de France Church, Rev. Abbe Bourassa, former secretary of Laval University, announced his entry upon the duties of pastor of that parish. The new incumbent began by paying a rare tribute to the virtues and good works of his predecessor, the late Cure Laroque. He then recalled the fact that when it was only supposed that Father Laroque would retire to take up his duties as visitor of the schools, he had been selected by the
