affair caused much sensation.

A large crowd of spectators awaited the Queen's arrival at Windsor. She walked across the platform of the railway station to the carriage waiting to take her to the castle. John Brown had already taken his seat behind, when a man standing at the entrance of the station yard among the spectators pointed a pistol at the carriage and fired. To judge from the report the pistol was not heavily loaded. The Queen, who was probably not aware of what had happened, was immediately driven to the Castle, but before she passed the man had been seized by the Superindriven to the Castle, but before she passed the man had been seized by the Superin-tendent of the Borough Police, who was standing near. The Irish Political System.

The Irish judges, who get their posi-tions through political service, do anything that is asked of them by their paymaster, the Government, which further means the British official who happens to preside at Dublin Castle over the governmental con-duct of Irish affairs. The full title of the duct of Irish affairs. The full title of the official is "Chief Secretary of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland." In reality he is the master, not the servant, of the lord-lieutenant. The latter is a mere figure-head to the chief of state; his so-called "chief secretary" is its captain. The lord-lieutenant is usually a nonentity in polities with a high-sounding name, who is tempted to take up the figurehead position by the substantial inducement of $100,000 a year—about double, if I remember correctly, what the President of United States receives for real work done Resolved, that we deeply sympathise with the bereaved husband and relatives of the estimable lady departed this life; we fervently pray Gcd to enable them to bear the sad bereavement with christian bear the sad bereavement with christian power.
