CARRIED THE VAULT KEY. The Mystery of a Brantford Law Office BRANTFORD, Jan. 14.—For some time Bat Hardy, Wilkes& Hardy, lawyers, law

The Mystery of a Brantford Law Office Solved by a Detective. BRANTFORD, Jan. 14.—For some time past Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy, lawyers, lawyers, noticed that their vault and con-tents of cash box had been tampered with. They made every effort to ascertain how it was but without success. They finally placed the case with the chief of police, who detailed policeman John Wilkes to tional costume which, for a wonder, b came her well. Elegantly cut, faultlessly finished, the fair rider's attire, from hat to gaiters, spoke the lady—to far, at least, as style went-and the c.itica placed the case with the chief of police, who detailed policeman John Wallace to investigate. Wallace took the case in hand and for some weeks past would nightly enter Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy's office at about 8 p. m. and remain till about 2 a. m. Up to Friday Wallace was not successful in getting at the trouble. The cash in the vault was still tampered with, though no person was seen at the vault. spectator was fast becom to the æsthetic claims of the h- w far ion, when the fair rider wo bled, he tated and was lost in a ditch at the a of the road.
