OSTRICH TACTICS.

Big Bird That Displayed as Much Cunning as an Apache Indian.

A well known hunter and taxidermist tells this story of personal experience in South Africa; it goes far beyond depicting a slander that has long clouded the fair name of the ostrich:

Arriving at one of the monster hills of the white ant, I climbed upon it and raised my observation glasses to my eyes for a careful survey of the region. My first glance showed me, arising from the dead level of the plain beyond, two objects, each having the form of a capital S. These I knew were the heads and necks of two ostriches. Though I believed they had sighted me, I remained immovable until their necks were suddenly drawn down to the level of the tops of the bushes which screened their bodies. Then I knew for a certainty that they were making a quick retreat.

"Without losing an instant's time I ran to the spot where the birds had been standing and found their tracks. These I followed as far as they were distinguishable and then took a course which I believed the birds would naturally follow. No sooner had I reached the top of the ravine than I saw one of the ostriches climbing the side hill. Estimating the distance, I took sight and fired. The ball passed immediately between his legs and struck in the sand of the side hill behind him.

"In an instant the bird darted away like an arrow in the direction of a small clump of bushes in the center of an open space. That he would pause behind this bush and then finally emerge on the other side seemed certain, and I aimed to catch him as he made a fresh start from behind the thorn. He flew over the sand at a terrific rate and reached the bushes. Then I waited fully five minutes for him to emerge from his hiding, with my rifle ready sighted so that I could pull the trigger the second he reappeared, but finally went forward to root him out.

When I reached the clump of bushes, an examination of the sand showed the tracks of the bird had shifted his course at a right angle, making the turn so suddenly that his feet had plowed up the sand for a distance of several inches. This wary tact had placed the bushes between the bird and myself, and he had made his way to new cover with the same innocent waiting for him on the other side of the ambush. An Apache Indian could not have executed this maneuver more cleverly, and I smiled at myself for having ever been foolish enough to believe the traditional story of how the silly ostrich buries his head in the sand and believes that he is thereby concealed."

SOME WRITERS.

Goldsmith wrote the "Vicar of Wakefield" in six weeks. It is said to have been a story of his own recollections.

Thomas Dunn English wrote "Ben Bolt" in 1843, and some fifty years later George Du Maurier made the tender song famous the world over.

It has been mentioned as a proof of Alexander Pope's love of economy that he wrote most of his verses on scraps of paper and particularly on the backs of letters.

Charlotte Bronte's "Jane Eyre" was rejected by nearly every publisher in England before it scored one of the greatest literary successes in the world's history.

Whittier, the poet, it is reported, said to the doctors in attendance a day or two before his death, "You have done the best possible, and I thank you; but it is of no use—I am worn out."

The poet Helme on the day after his marriage drew up a will in which he bequeathed all he possessed to his wife on condition that she married again. He desired, he said, that at least one man should regret his death.

The Arab Damsel's Advice.

When an Arab damsel gets married, her mother gives her the following advice for securing her future happiness: "You are leaving your nest to live with a man with whose ways and habits you are unfamiliar. I advise you to become the absolute mistress of your husband. Be satisfied with little, endeavor to feed him well and watch over his sleep, for hunger begets anger, and sleeplessness makes a man cross-brained. Be dumb as to his secrets, do not appear gloomy when he is merry nor merry when he is sad, and Allah shall bless you."

A Way-Old Acquaintance Have.

"It is too bad," said the visitor from home, "that people who acquire wealth are not the same to their old friends."

"Perhaps there is a reason for that," replied Mrs. Cumrox reminiscently. "People who acquire wealth have feelings the same as any one else, and their old friends sometimes have a very superior way of saying: 'Humph! I knew them when they were as poor as Job's turkey!'"

Witness—Oh, did, sir.

Attorney—And was the assault committed with malice aforethought?

Witness—No, sir; it was committed with a mallet behind the ear.

Man or Marry.

In the feudal days of Scotland, when noblemen thought it no disgrace to steal their neighbors' cattle, the aristocratic Sir Gideon Scott, a baron protected his vassals from the outrageous cattle-lifter by hanging outright those taken red-handed, without waiting for the slow progress of the law.

When Sir William Scott was a young Border laird he made one night a foray on Sir Gideon Murry's lands. While driving off a herd of cattle he was caught and being brought before Sir Gideon, ordered to be hanged. Hanging a cattle thief was such an every-day affair that Sir Gideon went about his ordinary business. But his wife, hearing that a handsome youth of a good family was to be executed, sought her husband, and indignantly exclaimed:

"Hoot, Gideon, what do I hear? You tak' the life of the winsome young Laird of Hardin, wi' three ill-fated men in 'the house o' year ain't to marry?"

"Ye're reeth, Maggie, my dear," replied the baron, grasping the situation. "Wullie shall tak' our muckle-mou'd Meg, or else he'll stretch for it."

The helpless prisoner consented, and much to his father's surprise, returned home with a bride from the neighbor's house he had ridden out to marry.

Didn't Find Her Money.

A young married woman from the south who was visiting New York with her husband left him in their hotel room one morning while she went on an errand. She was not accustomed to big hotels nor to big mishap in half an hour and knocked at the door. There was no response. "Let me in, honey," said the young woman, knocking more vigorously. Still no response.

"Honey, let me in," called the young woman, redoubling her exertions. "Honey, honey, let me in." She rattled the door and pounded with both fists, but there was the silence of the grave on the other side, but the young woman's voice rose to half a cry.

"Honey, artn't you there? I want to get in. Honey open the door." Then arose from the other side of the door a deep bass voice with a resentful note in it.

"Madam," it said, "this is not a beehive. This is a bathroom."

What's Was.

Beside the bar of a public house the other day in a Scottish Provincial town, a riveter from the adjoining shipbuilding yard was standing with a quart of beer in front of him, when a thirsty tramp entered.

"I'll buy you a penny," said the tramp. "That I could drink a pint out o' your quart measure, an' no tak' adrop mair or less."

"Done," said the riveter; and he handed him the quart.

The tramp drained the measure to the last drop, and then, putting a penny inside it, he handed it back to the riveter, with the words:

"Man, I thank ye."

"Man," said the riveter, as he gazed at the empty mug and the penny, "I ken you've lost, but what's won?"—Alliance News.

A Clerical Wit.

After a church conference held a few days ago, two brothers ministers had a friendly tilt regarding the meaning of a certain passage in one of Shakespeare's plays. They could not come to an understanding, and one of them remarked jokingly: "Oh, one of them remarked jokingly: 'Oh, when I meet him in heaven!'" But, when I meet him in heaven?" the other retorted. "Then you can ask him about it," was the reply.

Shrimp Fishing as a Novelty.

Shrimp fishing in Paris is a novelty of the day. Strange to say, the fishing grounds are twenty meters below the opulent houses along the embankment of that great Clichy sewer.

So as yet these shrimps are not on sale even at the most ultra Parisian restaurants. Favored parties are allowed to visit the subterranean stream, garbly in the electric light and can easily be caught in a hand net.

Compete in Inventing Toys.

The prize exhibition for original toys, organized by the perfect of police, is attracting unhopied-for competitors, including members of the institute.

M. Menete, the eminent sculptor, exhibits a monkey and a sauceman. The ape has burned his fingers with the hot contents and is looking at his scalded hand in cunning amazement. M. Jerome will color the toy which will be wound up mechanically.

Where and How Fancies Grow Best.

Give them, if possible, a place where they will be sheltered from the hot afternoon sun. Cut off the old flowers as they fade, and keep the ground mellow and free from weeds. They will bloom well until the hot days of midsummer. Then their flowers will be small, and there will not be many of them. It is a good plan to cut the old plants back at that time, and allow them to renew themselves for autumn.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Self-Possessed Woman.

The women of polite indulgence in few exclamations or superlatives and do not waste enthusiasm over trifles. She is gracious but never gushing, and she has acquired the habit of listening attentively, not awaiting with ill-concealed eagerness a pause in the conversation to enable her to rush in and take the floor.

The Real Mary Who Had the Lamb.

The author of "Mary Had a Little Lamb" was John Roulston, a young man who was a visitor at the school near Worcester, Massachusetts, when the incident occurred.

The heroine of the poem was Mary E. Sawyer, who afterward became Mrs. Columbus Tyler. She died in December, 1859.—Ladies' Home Journal.
