The C. P. R. have decided to call tenders for excavating and other work necessary to carry out their scheme to irrigate the dry belt near Calgary. The hope is to render three million acres fit for cultivation, one-half for cereals and the other half half for cereals and the other half for grazing. Three hundred thousand acres will be irrigated first, and after that much has been taken up by settlers the work will be extended. Two canals will be used to irrigate the tract, a main canal 35 miles long with a width at bottom of six feet, and carrying ten feet of water.
