

Plans For Enrichment of Land of St. Patrick Appeals to Love of Wealthy Irish-Americans.

A young Irish-American patriot has hit upon a plan for the delivery of his native land from the condition of industrial stagnation in which it has so long existed in its conversion into a realm of activity and prosperity. This plan amounts to an inspiration and it is carried out with such a response throughout the United States as guarantees its being carried to a successful culmination. The scheme in its entirety has but the one object, the enrichment of much American-made money in Irish industry on the native soil. It sounds merely businesslike and commonplace, but back of it is the romantic love of the Irishman for the old bogs of his native soil that remains as a passion despite the passing of generations in alien lands.

The Irish of America are to be asked to a home-coming in the summer of 1910. The invitation is to be extended particularly to those Irishmen who have accumulated wealth in this country. These men are urged to return to the Emerald Isle for the pleasure of it in the first place, but in the second place with an eye out for business opportunity. If, in the light of the things they have learned in the great and progressive America, they see opportunity for the investment of capital in Ireland they are asked to give particular attention to that investment. If enough opportunities are seen and developed the result will be a new era for Ireland and such an era as it has never known in its fight of centuries for prosperity under conditions that have been anything but favorable.

DETAILS OF THE PLAN.

In America are hundreds of thousands of Irishmen who have become men of means and leaders in many lines of activity. The breadth of enterprise in which these sons of Erin have engaged is limited merely by the opportunities of the broad land of their adoption. There is not one single line of activity in America in which there are not hundreds of successful Irishmen engaged. Their cumulative knowledge and understanding of affairs in the broadest sense cannot be surpassed by any race of people in the world to-day, for there is no race so versatile.

Now, in Ireland there has lain dormant through the centuries all manner of latent opportunity. A fecund soil is poorly tilled for lack of tools, great mining wealth has remained untouched through absence of railroad transportation, unlimited labor of the highest grade remains unemployed because spindles have never been set to work in Ireland at which they might work. From end to end of the island there are opportunities that have gone and are still going to waste.

The object of the home-coming is to bring the experience of the Irishman in America and the capital he has amassed to the virgin opportunity of the mother land, and cause that experience and capital to enlist itself to the possible and profitable industries there offered. Frank J. Kilikenny, of Washington, conceived the plan and launched it some months ago at a meeting of Irishmen in that city. The small body of men who first heard it were enthusiastic. They were Irishmen, and it gripped their hearts. They knew it would affect other Irishmen, and they tried it. They tried it on their friends, and they also seized upon it as an inspiration. In a few weeks Mr. Kilikenny began to be besieged with letters from all points of the compass. Irishmen in New York and San Francisco heard of the commercial home-coming and at once were interested in it. They wrote for fuller particulars. The news spread to Ireland, and the papers there wrote editorials on it, and the home folks wrote to Washington for particulars. There were no particulars, but the young originator about the making of definite plans, and he called upon various Irish organizations for co-operation and assistance, and the plans have taken shape.

WHAT SUGGESTED THE IDEA.

Mr. Kilikenny is secretary to the Comptroller of the Currency of the Nation. For so young a man he has gained an enviable position in the affairs of the country. Yet 15 years ago he landed in America as an Irish immigrant lad, poor, unlettered, but honest and with aspirations. He went to Chicago, and with the aspiration of his race for public life, his first position was that of bell-boy in a political club in the Windy City. He made friends of the men of the club, and with study by night, was soon able to ask for promotion. He came to Washington as secretary to a Congressman, and later entered the Treasury Department. In Washington hundreds of young men who are ambitious find a way to a profession by studying nights in schools maintained for that purpose, while they work by day in the departments. It was in this way that young Kilikenny became a lawyer, but he had also become indispensable to the Comptroller's office and was rapidly advanced.

But always his mind was on the mother country. He returned at intervals, and in the light of his own experience of Ireland about him. In his own country of Leitrim, for instance, he learned that there were great deposits of coal, but that the people were burning coal imported from England, and that the laborers were leaving their native heaths and going elsewhere in search of work. When he inquired as to why the coal fields were not worked, he was told there was not the transportation, not the machinery, nor the capital to initiate such an industry.

His father had been a farmer and cattle raiser. Yet there seemed little profit in farming. Irish lands held the world's record for acreage production of wheat, the island was known as the "Emerald Isle" because of its own of productive greenness. Of opportunity there was plenty, but wherever he went the crudest methods were employed and the tools with which crops were cultivated were those of a generation ago. The land laws had been discouraging and the means had not been on hand to procure new machinery. No country can compete with the world agriculturally without the machine, for other countries have it.

In the huts of the peasant he found that girls knitting industrially on rough socks were able to finish a pair in 12 hours. Yet across the channel the English girls had machines and the same socks were made in 20 minutes. There was not the means of procuring the machine and the Irish girl usually went to it or to some other opportunity offered outside of her native land.

So in the south of the island there are great deposits of iron yet undeveloped. In the waters that surround the island there is fishing wealth, yet the boats of the fishermen are crude and inadequate. Everywhere Mr. Kilikenny found the opportunity, but also he found everywhere a lack of appreciation of it and a lack of money with which to develop it. Ireland is and always has been a land of poor people and small capital. It has until recently been made unattractive to the investment of outside capital and to the improvement of the native home by the condition of the land laws. All this is changing and the opportunity is just now ripe for the putting in motion of the large industries that have slumbered through the centuries.

GREAT PREPARATIONS BEING MADE.

This is the opportunity to which the attention of 50,000 wealthy and successful Irish-Americans will be directed. Each man will look for the opportunity along the lines of his particular speciality. He will be asked to make money in Ireland with the same degree and kind of activity that has yielded him profit in America. He will be asked to go back to his old home and see if there is not the chance right among his own brothers and sisters to pull off one of those spectacular stunts. This is what he would do even if he were not asked, for his interests are with his native land, his loves are with the haunts of his childhood, the people of his youth are those to whom he is indebted, and what great progress he has made in the new world. For, be it known, the Irishman is in no way known to step from the halos of the spot light!

So, for the summer months of 1910 the Irishmen of America are invited to come to the guests of the Irishmen who have remained there. The railroads and the steamship companies will make special rates throughout the summer, and there will be plenty of congenial company doing the same thing. In order to get in a good thing you must wear the green!

Mr. Kilikenny has organized a headquarters for "The Home-Going" pilgrimage to Ireland in 1910, with offices in the Metropolitan Bank building, in Washington, and the details are being worked out. P. T. Moran, national director of the National Home-Coming, P. J. Halpin, editor of the National Hibernian; Hon. W. Bourke Cockran, member of Congress from New York; Dr. John Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame College, in Indiana; Chauncey Olcott, the popular Irish actor; Dr. Douglas Hyde, head of the Gaelic League, and hundreds of other prominent Irishmen have pledged themselves to the movement and are pushing it along.

In Ireland preparations are also beginning to take shape. From Dublin and Belfast word has come that such carnivals will be put on as have never been known in the history of those cities. In Waterford, Limerick, Cork, Queenstown, Tara, the home of the ancient kings, and all through the Lakes of Killarney the gala attire of the celebration of the home-coming will be in evidence. Even the smaller villages and communities will awake to the occasion and each will extend its welcome to its sons who have grown great abroad and who are returning to their native villages with the idea of enriching some of the American prosperity into the Irish conditions.

The celebration in the larger Irish cities will be under the direction of the Gaelic League. They will take the form of carnivals in ambitious cities of other lands, but will still be kept at typically Irish as possible. The native sports will be the programme of the celebration, and athletics will figure largely. The time of celebration will extend throughout the three months of the home-coming.

But in the more rural communities the celebration will be more typically Irish. In Tipperary, County Kerry and Westmeath the county fair will hold sway. The farmers and traders will drive in their cows and pigs and clasp hands in the market place over bargains in such a way as to suggest the original stock exchange. Native sports and races will call to mind the days of childhood, when these same successful Irish-Americans as ten-year-old boys sat up all night that they might still be awake when father started with the herds to the fair in the small hours of the morning. Some of the visitors may hold that "of all the towns in Ireland it's the town of Kilikenny for me," but the entertainment in all sections will be of the old Ireland, and it will be left to the visitors to discover the way to bring from these native conditions a new Ireland that will mean things for the future and will cause an industrial freedom of Ireland from her long-continued poverty, and with it a new order of things.

TELEGRAPH LINE.

New One to be Built From Quebec to Windsor.

Montreal, March 15.—A charter has been granted to the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company for the building of one thousand miles of line from Pointe Lévis, Que., to Windsor, Ont., with branches to several points in Ontario. The contract has been awarded to Mr. Michael Conolly, of this city, and work will commence at once. It is understood that the New Jersey Copper Company is behind the scheme, but several local capitalists, including ex-Judge Oumet and Hon. T. Berthiaume, are on the board. A feature of the scheme will be a uniform charge of twenty-five cents for messages from all parts of the system.

WAS ASSAULTED.

Amherstburg Man Attacked and Beaten While Walking With Lady.

Amherstburg, March 15.—While walking with a young lady last evening Herbert Coyle was assaulted. The attack occurred in front of the Mayor's residence. Three men sprang from behind some trees and jumped on Coyle, beating and kicking him until his cries for help brought Albert Fox and Gordon Colburn to the scene, when the assailants fled. Coyle was badly cut about the head and was taken to a hospital in Detroit for treatment. The motive for the attack is not known.

PICKETING ILLEGAL.

Decision of Judge Mathers in Winnipeg Case.

Winnipeg, March 15.—A decision which must have a very important bearing on strikes and labor disputes was given by the Court of Appeal today in the case of Cotter vs. the Plumbers' Union, the court holding that picketing in the case of a strike is illegal, and sustaining the judgment of the lower court awarding the plaintiff $2,000 damages for the loss occasioned to him by a strike. Costs were not allowed to either party.

The original suit was brought by the Master Plumbers of the city against the defendants, the Journeyman Plumbers, and members of the local unions, to restrain them from interfering with the plaintiffs and the men they had hired during the plumbers' strike, and to recover damages for injuries they considered had been received. The case was tried before Judge Mathers, who held that the defendants had broken the law, and had thereby rendered themselves liable to damages for inducing those who remained in the plaintiffs' employ, or who afterwards entered the same, to leave their employment. There was no doubt the plaintiffs were seriously damaged by the strike, and what followed it.

GENERAL BOOTH'S VICTORY.
Aged Salvationist No Longer Debarred from Russia.

New York, March 15.—The American has received the following cable despatch from London: General Booth, who has long been forbidden access to the Russian empire, as if he were a revolutionist or assassin, has at last triumphed. He will arrive in St. Petersburg Friday, March 26, all opposition to his visit having been withdrawn by the Government having been withdrawn. He will be entertained by the English Club as an honored guest. It is understood that he will be received by the Czar.

The site for a fine new million-dollar eleven-story hotel has been secured on Phillips square, Montreal, at a cost of $75,000. It is said that Mr. Cooper, of the St. Lawrence Hall, and several New York capitalists, are behind the scheme. Stringent regulations regarding moving picture shows have been framed by the Provincial Government.

MUSICIANS AND PLAYERS

There are three old favorites, hot favorites, on the bill at Bennett's Theatre this week, and they were given a warm reception at the opening performance yesterday. They are Patsy Doyle, the droll monologue artist, and Hoey and Lee, the Hebrew comedians. Doyle has a new line of talk, but he told his stories in his own inimitable way. The Hebrew pair told some of the best stories that have been sprung here in many a moon, but their best humor was shown in their parodies. Their imitation of Harry Lander was a scream from start to finish. Curtain calls were given all three of the old boys.

Much interest was shown in the appearance of Lawrence Crane, the Irish magician. His work was a revelation—it was highly sensational and pleasingly original. His glass trunk mystery is far ahead of any of the many trunk tricks done here by any of the black art workers. He mystified the audience, from Manager Appleton to the smallest boy in the gods. Mr. Crane's act was richly staged, enhancing the effect of his work very much.

The burlesque, "The Laughing Horse," brought down the house. It was presented by Josephine Clayton & Co., five people, and they all worked hard to amuse. The act, as a laugh provoker, is a winner.

Middleton, Spellmeyer & Co. presented a novel sketch entitled, "A Texas Wooing," which was decidedly original in conception and had a wild, woolly air about it. Several real Indians are used in the act, which was well received.

Florenz Tempest took the house by storm, when she sang, "Oh, You Kid." She was pleasing in all her numbers, but the Broadway song made the hit of the show. She is a pleasing singing comedienne and will be one of this week's favorites with the patrons.

Yamamoto Brothers, Japanese equilibrist, did some very sensational acts, and were well received by those who like that kind of entertainment. New motion pictures closed the excellent bill.

A GREAT PLAY.

"The Witching Hour" by Augustus Thomas, which will appear at the Grand next Monday and Tuesday, is said to be a great play. It is not a lesson, a is the best remedy for rheumatism. It's a stubborn disease but Scott's Emulsion conquers in the end. Try it.

ALL DRUGGISTS

Mr. Selman as Galvin Dysart, the little minister, was quite at home and his work showed his versatility. The play was well staged and altogether the performance was pleasing and edifying. The bill should draw large houses during the week.

AL WILSON WAS GOOD.
Al Wilson, the ambassador of German dialect and the possessor of a golden voice, never appeared to better advantage here than he did at the Grand last night in his new vehicle, "When Old New York Was Dutch." And he never received a warmer reception here. There was a large audience present and the applause accorded the star was hearty indeed. The play had ear marks of "The Prince of Tatters." A pretty love story is told, and it is interspersed with songs. The scenes are descriptive of a period antedating the revolution, when the Dutch and English were alternately in possession of New Amsterdam (now New York City), and when there were hardly any distinctly Americans. The plot, which is clean and interesting, deals with the enmity existing between the British governor and the old Dutch patriots.

Mr. Wilson sang a number of songs most acceptably. The gem of the evening, however, was "Helen." He was supported by a capable company and the play was well staged.

ETHEL BARRYMORE MARRIED.
Boston, March 16.—Miss Ethel Barrymore, the actress, now appearing in "Lady Frederick," at the Hollis Street Theatre, and Russell Griswell, Col. of Bristol, R. I., son of Colonel Samuel Pomeroy Colby, for many years President of the United States Rubber Company, were married at the rectory of the Catholic Church of the Most Precious Blood in Hyde Park yesterday morning.

AN ENJOYABLE RECITAL.
A delightful programme was presented at the musical recital given in St. Paul's A. M. E. Church last night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. It was given by W. H. Holland, basso, assisted by Miss Henrietta Johnson, violinist, Toronto, and Mrs. Clara Duval-Rudd. The programme:

Son of the Desert Phillips Mazurka Musin
Love Sloan
Mrs. Clara Duval-Rudd.
(a) Violets Roma
(b) Toreador's Love Song Conchelos Cavatina Raff
Miss Henrietta Johnson.
When We're Together (Duet) Violin Obliga-
to James
Mrs. Duval-Rudd and W. H. Holland.
Honor and Arms (Messiah) Handel
W. H. Holland.
One of the most pleasing numbers on the programme was the duet by Mr. Holland and Mrs. Rudd, with violin obligato by Mr. F. J. Howard. Miss Johnson, of Toronto, made a most favorable impression, and will no doubt be seen here again. She is a clever violinist. The accompaniments were played by Miss Kathleen Holland.

A large audience enjoyed the programme and the recital, which was served at the close by the ladies.
Rev. Isaac Couch, pastor of Gore Street Church, was chairman.
