THE GRIM OLD TOWER OF LONDON.

Although the tower has been so frequently described, a brief glance even at this moment may reveal a few features which have hitherto been overlooked. Everybody is acquainted with the traitors' Gate. Opposite this gate, from which the waters of the Thames are now walled off, is the Bloody Tower where the sons of Edward IV. are said to have been destroyed by order of that cruel Prince, but splendid soldier, so woefully maligned by Shakespeare in his tragedy of Richard the Third. The wall of this tower is, in thickness, thirty feet, and the gateway was formerly defended by two portcullises, one of which, five hundred years old, can still be lowered at a moment's notice. The Wakefield Tower, which may claim fame equal to that of the Black hole of Calcutta, stands close by; for here, after the battle from which it takes its name, were imprisoned at night one hundred persons, and half the number were found alive in the morning, the other half having been suffocated. Immediately within this gate- way is the approach of the Jewel Room, where the Regalia, in glazed cases, are kept. Here her Majesty's Crown, set with three thousand diamonds, valued at a matter of a million sterling, is to be seen; and in front of which is distinguish- able an immense ruby, present- ed by Pedro the Second, of Castile, to Edward the Black Prince, and said to have been worn by the English King at the battle of Agincourt. For visitors from the country, no doubt, one of the chief objects of attraction here will be the famous Koh-i-noor, which, how- ever, is only represented by a glass model set in the original bracket. The story itself is in the possession of the Queen whose private property it is— having been presented to her Majesty by the army which captured it at Umritser, near Lahore, in 1848. A warder who was present at the engage- ment is one of the sentinels of the Jewel Room. One of the most interesting features in the State show is the White Tower, the walls of which are fourteen feet in thickness, and which was built by William the Conqueror, according to the plans of Gundulph, Bishop of Rochester Castle. The ar- moury is from an historical point of view perhaps the most important feature in the ex- hibition, for here we have not only the arms and armour of fifty generations, but also the complimentary evidence that, as a rule, our forefathers were of no larger stature than our- selves, although the door is kept by a man at arms seven feet high. The handsomest suit of armour in this collection is that of Charles I
