Squire Hunt has expressed his indignation at the small mouthful of bread he receives in St. Thomas for a nickel, and contends the bakers ask an exorbitant price for the staff of life in comparison with the price of flour. The Squire has also been consulting his law books, and says that under the act a loaf of bread must weigh either 24 or 48 ounces. Aylmer is having troubles of her own on the bread question, and the poor man is feeling the strain of advanced prices.

Cruelty to animals was the charge on which a Malahide farmer came before Magistrate Summers at the police court Tuesday. It was proven that on a recent very cold day, the accused drove to Aylmer, tied his horse in a place where it was exposed to the biting winds at 11 a. m., where it remained until the police tied it in a stable in the evening, while the owner spent the day in seeing how drunk he could get. For the sake of his family his name is withheld. The prisoner got off with a fine of $5.00 and costs, over $12 in all, which he paid. No one would have complained had he been ordered tied to the same post for the same length of time his poor horse shivered and suffered.
